Tory rebel MPs prepare to go against Cameron in vote over EU

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

REBEL Kent MPs are expected to defy Conservative Party orders and vote in favour of a controversial referendum on the UK's membership of the European Union.

A motion calling for a national referendum by May, 2013, is due to be discussed in the House of Commons tomorrow, but Prime Minister David Cameron is putting pressure on Tory backbenchers to reject the proposal.

However, at least four Kent Conservatives – Mark Reckless (Rochester and Strood), Tracey Crouch (Chatham and Aylesford), Gordon Henderson (Sittingbourne and Sheppey) and Bob Stewart (Beckenham) – are expected to ignore a three-line whip after putting their signatures to the motion.

A number of other Tories in the county have previously voiced their support for a referendum on Europe and may also have a key part to play.

Mr Reckless, who helped secure the debate after delivering a pitch to the Backbench Business Committee on Tuesday, said he encouraged all MPs to vote in line with their own opinions.

"Hundreds of thousands of members of the public have signed petitions demanding that we debate this issue," he said. "This is the least they deserve."

"I've always just voted on the merits of an issue. Most of the time I support what the Government is doing, but it depends on what is being debated."

"What will the whips do exactly if we go against them? Unless people are looking to be promoted then they are free to make their own decision – and that's what I urge them to do."

The motion submitted by Mr Reckless

'Everyone will be expected to support the Government and they'll have to explain themselves if they don't', says Fallon

says the public should have three options put to them if a referendum is held – keeping the status quo, leaving the EU, or reforming the terms of the UK's membership.

The Government will not be bound by the outcome of the vote, but the Prime Minister may find it difficult to continue to refuse a public vote if that is what the majority of MPs decide they want.

Ms Crouch said: "I feel the public wants to have a say on Europe and I believe MPs should be allowed a free vote. The petition scheme was set up so issues like this can be discussed in Parliament.

"I'm not concerned about going against the whip. I've been receiving strong messages of support from my constituents, many of whom are saying I should ignore the party line."

The agreement signed by the Coalition members following last year's General Election commits the UK to being a 'positive participant' in the EU, which means Lib Dem MPs are also under pressure to reject the referendum option.

Labour leader Ed Miliband has also asked his party members to vote against it.

Conservative Party deputy chairman Michael Fallon – who has served as Sevenoaks MP for 14 years – warned his Kent colleagues against defying the whip.

He said: "It's never been party policy to favour an 'in/out' referendum, which is part of the motion.

"Everyone will be expected to support the Government and they will have to explain themselves if they do not."

ELECTION

Was Ukip by-election surge triggered by Government's planning reforms?

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

GOVERNMENT policy-makers have been warned to take notice of a strong performance by the UK Independence Party in a recent council by-election.

Although the Conservatives held the Meopham North seat on Gravesham council with 47 per cent of the vote last week, Ukip stormed into second place with 34 per cent despite having never contested the ward before.

The surge in support for the Euro-sceptic party has been put down to candidate Geoff Clark's campaigning against the Government's controversial National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), which includes provision to build on greenbelt land, and championed by Tunbridge Wells Tory MP and minister Greg Clark.

The document, which is currently out for consultation, could mean hundreds of new homes being built in north-west Kent – including Meopham – under Gravesham council's draft local development framework.

Damian Lyons Lowe, chief executive of the polling organisation Survation, said public anger over the NPPF could cause the Tories to lose seats in more marginal areas of the country.

"At the last General Election, the Ukip candidate stood for Parliament in

GREEN: The National Planning Policy Framework could haunt Tory vote

Gravesham and received only a very small percentage of the vote," he said. "So to go from that to 34 per cent proves there's some swing to be had here over this issue.

"Where it's tight in some constituencies, the greenbelt matter could tip the balance. If I was a Tory strategist, I'd be looking to see where Ukip does have some presence.

"The NPPF is not something that's going to be cleared up soon. Come the next General Election, homes will still be being built and plans will still be in place, and if they're upsetting people then they will blame the Government.

"I think Ukip have struck a chord with this one. It's clearly a successful strategy and I think they will continue to hone it."

In Gravesham council's draft local development framework (LDF), rural locations have been outlined for new affordable homes despite much of them falling on greenbelt land.

Town hall chiefs admitted the revised LDF, which had to be changed following the scrapping of the South East Plan, included the possibility of development on greenbelt land, although they said the total greenbelt area was expected to expand.

Ukip leader Nigel Farage said: "Geoffrey has done us proud, and coming second only to the Conservatives proves Ukip is fast becoming a growing force in British politics.

"People are starting to realise we are not just about the EU, but also offer credible policies on what matters to them locally at a time when the so-called mainstream parties are failing them.

"I believe the Conservatives' greenbelt planning policy cost them votes locally, but it is also clear that Ukip took votes from the Labour Party, proving we are not just an option for fed-up Tories."

Mother of star Orlando takes centre stage with help from her little friends

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

IT'S NOT every day the mum of an A-list Hollywood actor pops into school to talk to a class of star-struck pupils.

It's even less likely that she should come armed with a collection of stick insects, caterpillars and other creepy-crawlies other parents might shy away from.

But that's exactly what happened when Sonia Copeland Bloom – mother of Three Musketeers heartthrob Orlando Bloom – returned to her son's old school of St Edmund's, Canterbury, to give a talk about the importance of protecting nature's smallest creatures.

"There are huge numbers of children who go out into the world knowing nothing about nature because they're too tied up in their mobile phones and computer games," she said.

"We're in danger of forgetting the importance of being outside and knowing about insects, but they received a lovely reaction from the pupils at St Edmund's. They were fascinated by them, if not a little worried about some of the bigger ones, so it was a very rewarding experience."

Ms Copeland Bloom has written a series of children's books about insects entitled Tales and Truths About Garden Minibeasts, which features such characters as Basil the Beetle and Eddie the Earthworm.

CLASS ACT: Sonia Copeland Bloom, mum of Orlando Bloom (right), with the pupils from St Edmund's

The former University of Kent information officer revealed she had also written a book especially for her nine-month-old grandson Flynn, whose mother is Orlando Bloom's Australian model wife Miranda Kerr.

Lord of the Rings and Pirates of the Caribbean star Bloom, 34, returned to Canterbury in July last year when he was gifted an honorary degree from the University of Kent.

"Orlando's been very busy in Los Angeles and most recently in New Zealand, where he's been filming The Hobbit with Peter Jackson," said Ms Copeland Bloom.

"He certainly has a lot of affection for Canterbury and when he's returned in the past he's visited all the places he knew so well growing up.

"He does keep in touch with a lot of the friends he had at St Edmund's, as they are the most important to him because they knew him before he was famous and so he treasures them.

"It's very difficult not seeing him very often, especially now he's given me a beautiful, gorgeous grandson. But we are lucky today having emails and iPhones, which are fantastic.

"I've written a book for Flynn and have told Orlando I'm happy to go and see them at the drop of a hat. I don't want Flynn to grow up without some influence and a lot of affection from his granny."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Ice truckers on standby

KENT County Council says its winter service fleet is on standby to begin salting roads if icy conditions hit.

More than 60 salting lorries will be used to keep key parts of the road network open.

KCC's Cllr Bryan Sweetland, said: "The past two years have seen some of the harshest winter weather for three decades and we are well-prepared for similar weather this year." Some 180 farmers are on standby to clear dedicated routes.

Towers face demolition

THE demolition of Richborough's iconic cooling towers and chimney is expected to take place at the beginning of next year.

Despite plans for them to be torn down by the end of December, BFL Management Ltd, commissioned by owner Richborough A Ltd to manage the site, said it would not be until 2012.

A planning application has now been submitted to Thanet District Council to remove the chimney and towers, built around 60 years ago.

MP's Boris Island plea

ROCHESTER and Strood Tory MP Mark Reckless has asked for assurances an airport will not be built in the Thames Estuary.

He has asked new transport secretary Justine Greening to confirm the Government will still not support such a scheme. He said: "I know residents have been sick of hearing rumours about a potential 'Boris Island' or similar, and I want the record set straight for my constituents once and for all."

PROPERTY REPORT

Kent in strong position to weather storm, claims new property report

KENT'S property market is in a positive position compared to neighbouring counties, despite a tough economic year.

That was the conclusion of the 20th Kent Property Market Report, which revealed the county had seen a minor overall improvement with positive changes that could unlock potential investment.

Despite the major knock of Pfizer withdrawing from Sandwich and poor financial and business growth in some areas of the county, the opening of Turner Contemporary in Margate and the Marlowe in Canterbury were both highlighted as encouraging factors.

Enterprise Zone status at the new Sandwich Discovery Park was also outlined as a positive sign, with around 1,000 jobs expected to be created by the end of 2012.

The report, written by Kent County Council and property consultant Cluttons, stated that high-speed rail services and other infrastructure projects, such as the East Kent Access road, meant companies were finding Kent an attractive proposition.

According to the document, the number of businesses looking to locate to the area

MARKET: Locate in Kent's chief executive Paul Wookey, and Alison Owen of Cluttons remained "healthy".

Chief executive of Locate in Kent, Paul Wookey, said the report showed the county was well placed to lead the recovery in the South East.

"I wouldn't want to give the impression that Kent is immune from problems with the economy," he said.

"But I'm very positive in terms of the types of people we're talking to, the potential investors for example.

"They see Kent as being an exciting place for the future. I'm very positive that when the economy shows improvement, we'll be in a much better position than other parts of the UK and Europe. It's important we don't lose sight of that."

He added: "Looking back over the major infrastructure investments over the 20 years of the Kent Property Market Report, it's clear to see that those initiatives have put us in a strong position to weather the current climate and grow when the time is right."

Leader of KCC Cllr Paul Carter admitted the last year had been "ghastly" in terms of the economic situation.

"These are tough economic times and we need to do all we can to get the Kent economy moving faster.

"We have the housing and development sites, but housing completions have fallen in Kent and across the country.

"We need to overcome obstacles that are stopping housing being built and do all we can to generate new business growth and new local jobs. The Kent property market story over the last 20 years is a good one. In tough economic times, we must ensure Kent remains the place to do business."

Caught on film, OAP's near miss

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

THESE pictures show just how close an elderly woman was to tragedy after a dangerous driver came within a whisker of knocking her over.

Now police are seeking the driver involved in the incident on Allington Road, Paddock Wood, on Monday, October 3.

The incident occurred at around 11.20am as the woman was walking home over the rail bridge, while she was waiting to cross the road.

One car stopped to let her pass and as she began to walk another white car pulled out to overtake the stationary vehicle, narrowly missing her. The car didn't stop and drove off towards Matfield. The victim was shaken, but thankfully unhurt by the incident.

The car involved is thought to be a white VW Polo, circa 1999 model, with a black sun-roof, and the driver is being described as having brightly coloured red hair and being around 20 to 30-years-old.

Investigating officer DC Mathew Hulbert said: "We are releasing this footage in a bid to bring forward more information about the incident or in the hope that the driver of the offending vehicle will contact us to clear their conscience."

"We are especially keen to talk to a male driver who stopped to help the woman after the incident. He was driving a small car and may have attempted to catch up with the offending vehicle."

Anyone with information is asked to contact Kent Police on 01892 502041 or Kent

Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111. ■ See www.yourtunbridgewells.co.uk for all the latest news and sport in your area.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Fire safety warning

FIREFIGHTERS have urged people to take care with bonfires after a blaze got out of control near Meopham, destroying sheds and trees.

Emergency services were called to the fire in Timberbank, Vigo Village, at around 7.20pm last Friday to tackle the flames.

Swanscombe Watch manager John Allwright said: "If your bonfire becomes out of control, never try to tackle it yourself as you could be injured. Always call the fire and rescue service."

Heritage status bid

AN update on Chatham's bid to become a World Heritage Site will be delivered to residents at a meeting at Brompton Barracks next month.

Chatham hopes that should it secure the prestigious status it will act as a major boost for tourism and business in the town. The meeting is free to attend and takes place at the Royal School of Military Engineering on November 3 from 6-7.45pm. Places must be reserved by October 28 by calling 01634 331176, or emailing chathamworldheritage@medway.gov.uk.

Price your own wine

SIX months after collapsing under £20 million of debts, off-licence chain Oddbins is back with a new store in Tunbridge Wells.

From October 20-23, customers will be able to blind-taste wines in-store and provide the price they're happy to pay. The wines will then be sold at the 'customer recommended price'.

The store will be in Mount Pleasant Road.

EDUCATION

Strong support for new school bid

PARENTS in Kings Hill say they are ready to get involved in a push to create a new secondary school to cater for its booming population.

At a meeting of the Kings Hill Conservatives last Friday, residents expressed a strong desire for a concerted push to get a new school up and running, despite improvements to nearby Malling School.

The issue was one of a number raised during the Any Questions? event held at the David Lloyd Health & Fitness Centre. Those on the panel fielding residents' questions were local MP Sir John Stanley, Kent county councillor Richard Long, and Kings Hill councillors Chris Brown and Trevor Robins.

A spokesman for the Conservatives Association said: "It became clear there is a body of parents ready to become involved in helping to create a project for a new secondary school in Kings Hill in response to a rapidly growing population in Kings Hill and the surrounding area. Sir John said a new secondary school at Kings Hill would be highly beneficial to the area."

The call comes after a third primary school in the development at West Malling was not among the first of the new-style 'free' schools to be given the nod by the Government.

Residents calling for a return of City rail services were also urged by the MP to establish a "strong campaign group" when the negotiations for the next rail franchise contracts are under way. Southeastern's franchise runs until 2014.

PLANNING

No rift with MP on planning reform

TUNBRIDGE Wells council leader Bob Atwood has strongly denied any rift with local MP Greg Clark after the cabinet agreed to "strongly disagree" with parts of the Government's controversial reform to planning policy.

At a meeting of the council to discuss the National Planning Policy Framework – being championed by the Tory minister – the cabinet agreed to express concerns about the proposals.

Designed to simplify the planning process, a key cornerstone to the NPPF is a "presumption in favour of sustainable development".

This sent alarm bells ringing with a number of councils and conservation groups that it could give the green light to building on areas of previously protected countryside. Mr Clark has looked to ease these concerns during the public consultation which came to an end on Monday.

However, Cllr Atwood denied any rift with the MP. He said: "I can absolutely confirm that relations between the council and Greg Clark have not soured in anyway. We are in a period of consultation about the NPPF and the council has put its points of view to Greg in a robust fashion."

Mr Clark seemed non-plussed, saying simply: "We take all submissions to the consultation period very seriously."

TRANSPORT

Anniversary hits the road

CROSSKEYS Coaches is commemorating its 40th year of business with the launch of a new website www.crosskeys.co.uk.

The company started in Hythe, with a couple of minibuses, but is now based in Folkestone. It has a fleet of 18 coaches varying in size from a 16-seat minibus to three 70-seat vehicles. The firm's newest acquisition is a 40 seat Setra.

At Business Week Live the company will be showing off some of its fleet.

Alan Johnson, managing director said: "It's essential to keep up to date with technology, as well as with the needs of our customers. We hope the new website and news page helps us achieve this."

Big opening as Business Week Live puts China in your hands

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@kentnews.co.uk

BUSINESS Week Live will give Kent companies the chance to see how they can break into the world's fastest growing large economy - China.

Leading exhibitor Kent Invicta Chamber has recently signed a Memorandum of Understanding to deliver a new international trade service in the county, to help exporters gain greater insight and access to markets.

LinkToChina, is a service designed to facilitate practical links with the officially designated China Council for the Promotion of International Trade.

The project is designed to help projects involving export, import, manufacturing, finance, technology co-operation, service industries, advanced engineering, low-carbon/clean fuel economy, and inward investment.

It will provide fast-track business matchmaking opportunities between Kent and China and facilitate business partnership building for trade and investment cooperation.

Jo James, chief executive of Kent Invicta, which has taken stand 23 for the show at Dover Exhibition Centre, on Wednesday, October 26, said: "We are delighted to be in a position to offer this service on behalf of the British Chambers of Commerce to businesses in Kent."

"The chamber is committed to supporting exporters in the county and already provides a range of international services, from export documentation to training programmes."

"Up to now our activities have mainly been focused around developing trade within the European markets and we are delighted to be part of this exciting programme and be in a position to assist Kent companies explore potential new lucrative markets further afield."

Olga D'Silva will be speaking on behalf of the Institute of Directors at Business Week Live, and will be continuing with the international theme.

She said: "The Institute of Directors Kent is prolific in the different types of business events it holds in the county, and you don't have to be a member to join in. IoD Kent puts on some 70 events a year, and I recommend you take a look at the website to see what's on offer and how IoD Kent can help support you in business, at www.iokent.com/kent."

"For me, successful business is about developing and nurturing successful business relationships, and of course this becomes a challenge when the international dimension is factored in."

"This is one reason why in March, 2010, together with the events and marketing committee and with the help and support of our indefatigable branch manager, Debbie Cameron, I helped to set up IoD Kent's International Business Forum. Its raison d'être is to help and support companies who are taking their first steps in international trading, as well as those already doing so, but who wish to improve existing international markets or explore new ones."

She continued: "Good international trading must always be underpinned by sound financing, so IoD Kent are very pleased that HSBC sponsor the International Business Forum."

"Previous topics for IoD Kent's International Business Forum have been diverse, country topics include France, Belgium and China and we have explored finding new customers overseas, generating international sales leads and business opportunities, exporting, identifying and maximising international trade show opportunities, the economic outlook and minimising foreign exchange risk."

INSURANCE

Event gives a face to the man behind the business

THE opportunity of getting to know the person behind the company is one aspect of the up-coming Business Week Live event which is of particular interest to commercial insurance specialist Simon Hammond.

The owner of The Hammond Consultancy, based in Ashford, is getting ready to celebrate 10 years in business on January 1, 2012.

He said: "The event is a good opportunity to meet the person behind the business, rather than just communicating via email or on the telephone."

"It's a chance to get to know the real decision-makers. This is something I consider important in building a successful relationship. The consultancy works mainly with small to medium-sized enterprises and can tailor all insurance provision to a company's specific needs - however unusual they may sometimes be."

"Every business is different," said Mr Hammond. "Even if you are talking to two woodworkers, they will not have the same requirements. I look forward to welcoming my fellow attendees at stand 54."

Mr Hammond has more than 20 years' experience in the insurance industry and established The Hammond Consultancy after identifying what he saw as a gap in the market - service.

He says the independent company offers the most competitive and suitable product after a thorough review of the market.

BUDGET

'Tough' cuts decisions to be put to residents as council tightens belt

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

BROMLEY Council chiefs say there are "some tough choices" to be made as they look to consult residents on what services they "can live without".

The council says it has to make over £30million of savings over the next three years – in addition to the £22m it had to cut from its budget last year.

Now council leader Stephen Carr has written an open letter to the people of Bromley calling on them to attend a string of public meetings across the borough in November.

In the letter, Cllr Carr said: "We have to be realistic and honest with you and discuss what services you think we can do without and what services can be provided differently through whoever is best placed to deliver them. And where the money should be used knowing every penny spent in one area could mean we have to make a saving in another.

"We are also fighting for the people of Bromley to get a fairer deal from government funding. Did you know that because of the current system we receive only £214 per head of population compared with the highest level in London of £1,043, less than half the average of £540? Did you know we also lose out on other government grants and that if Bromley received the average level of grant funding for London our income would increase by approximately £110m?"

Cllr Carr also said the council was protecting front line services wherever possible and scrutinising and reviewing each one of its services.

He added: "Work is under way to share the management of our library service with Bexley to save over £350,000. We are talking to Croydon and Bexley about other areas where services can be shared and our staff costs will be cut further to save more than £3m.

"However, our costs are already low and with one of the lowest council tax levels in outer London we are now at a point where it is very challenging to find further efficiencies and what are known as back office savings."

The public meetings, which will be attended by the council's top decision makers, are as follows: November 8, Civic Centre, 11am-12.30pm; November 17, Orpington Methodist Church, 7.30-9pm; November 23, Civic Centre, 7.30-9pm; November 28, Citygate Church, Beckenham, 7.30-9pm.

MONEY: The meetings will discuss how to make £30m of savings

FIRE

Chip shop blaze

A FIRE broke out in a fish and chip shop in Maidstone last Saturday afternoon – with emergency crews forced to wear breathing apparatus to tackle the flames.

The blaze broke out at around 12.15pm in Sutton Road. The fire was on the ground floor of the two-storey building. Firefighters extinguished the flames by 1.25pm but remained on the scene into the afternoon.

EDUCATION

Stampede starts for grammar school places

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE race is on to secure a place at one of Kent's grammar schools as youngsters receive their results in the 11-plus exam.

But with just 4,491 places for the 5,308 pupils assessed as suitable for a September, 2012, grammar placement, the competition is fierce.

Families of all Year Six children are being urged to submit their applications for places at both high schools and grammars now.

Up to four preferred schools can be named.

More than 11,000 children who sat the Kent Test in September, including 1,288 from outside of the county, received their results this week, with some 5,308 assessed suitable for grammar school. But many could be left disappointed, with just 4,491 placements available – 817 less than required.

Education chiefs at County Hall said families had just a couple of weeks to submit their application for a secondary school placement.

Kent County Council cabinet member for education, learning and skills, Cllr Mike Whiting, said the decisions families will be making over the next two weeks were important.

"The secondary school years are when children turn into young adults and finding the right school to suit their educational needs will be a parent's primary focus," he said.

"The good news is that Kent has a diverse range of secondary schools where, if a child is prepared to put the effort in, they will reap the rewards.

"For more than a decade, GCSE results in the county have improved year-on-year and young

BATTLE FOR A PLACE:

There are 817 fewer grammar school places than required to meet the demand of all the pupils who passed the 11-plus exam people have been given the knowledge and skills to pursue their careers."

Last year, 17 per cent missed out on their first preference of school due to the high numbers applying, but 97 per cent were offered one of the four schools they chose.

Those who did not get one of their four choices were allocated a school place by KCC, which is a statutory duty of the authority.

The council stressed that a grammar school assessment did not guarantee a child would be offered a place at a selective school.

A spokesman said: "If more children apply for places than a school can accommodate the school will use its over-subscription criteria to decide which children it can take."

Families can apply for placements online at www.kent.gov.uk/ola.

The official closing date is Monday, October 31, but due to the half term holiday applications received before 5pm on Friday, November 4, from Kent resident families, will be considered to be on time.

Families will find out which school their children have been allocated on March 1, 2012.

In Medway, parents also have until 4pm on Monday, October 31, to name up to six secondary school choices for September, 2012.

Parents and carers living in Medway should submit applications to the council, even if they include schools outside of the Medway area.

Cabinet member for children's services, Cllr Les Wicks, said: "Making the move onto secondary school can sometimes be a quite daunting time for young people and families, but it is of course also an exciting time full of opportunities.

"Here in Medway we have a selection of fantastic secondary schools each offering young people the chance to learn, grow and fulfill their potential."

See www.medway.gov.uk/onlineadmissions to apply.

■ A motion calling for the resignation of Cllr Wicks was put forward at a council meeting on Thursday by Cllr Adam Price, following a series of mistakes, including the 11-plus fiasco at Chatham Grammar School for Boys and the Rainham School for Girls, where the test was being held.

Instructions were missing from the English exam paper causing the exam to overrun by 90 minutes and sparking numerous complaints from parents.

CHARITY

Hospice raises £12,000 as stars' art proves big draw at charity auction

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

ORGANISERS of a VIP charity fundraising art exhibition and auction say the event raised more than £12,000.

A host of big names contributed artwork for the event at Tunbridge Wells' Brew House Hotel, with all work auctioned off to raise vital funds for Pembury's Hospice in the Weald.

Entitled Lyrical Journeys, the exhibition showcased art by personalities from the world of film, television, art and music using the lyrics of their favourite song as inspiration.

Those contributing included Queen guitarist Brian May, actor Hugh Grant, radio host Sir Terry Wogan, and The Who lead singer Roger Daltrey.

Among those in attendance on the night were Sissinghurst star Ian Hislop – editor of Private Eye magazine and long-time panel member on hit BBC comedy Have I Got News For You – and Cheryl Baker, the Sevenoaks-based TV presenter and former Bucks Fizz singer.

All works were auctioned anonymously, with the top bid of £350 going for a piece of art by Neil Buchanan, former presenter of children's TV favourite Art Attack, and his interpretation of Singin' in the Rain.

The event was hosted by the hospice and Sevenoaks artist Guy Portelli.

The hospice's fundraising director, Rachel Holweger, said: "The involvement of so many celebrities was really quite exceptional and added excitement and glamour to the event.

"As a charity it is often hard to get such involvement as they are being asked so often. We are delighted so many well-known personalities joined in with such enthusiasm."

The Hospice in the Weald provides care free of charge for patients, their carers and families.

It needs to raise £5 million each year to continue to provide its essential service.

Do you have children?

It seems like a perfectly innocent question. For many people, it's a welcome question because it allows them to open up about an important area of their lives and find common ground.

But it can be a terrible, painful question for many infertile couples - and women in particular - to answer. No matter how much they would love to start a family, 1 in 5 couples cannot have children. How do they begin to answer such a question without exposing and re-experiencing their grief and hurt? Although the reasons for their childlessness vary, from cancer to early menopause and other, unexplained causes, they all share the same distress, confusion and sense of profound loss.

For those who have reached the limits of what modern medicine can offer, one final path is open to them: They can find a rare, generous woman willing to be an altruistic egg donor. In the U.K., egg donors are altruistic. This week, the Human Fertilisation & Embryology Authority (HFEA), which regulates all areas of infertility treatment, announces its decision about whether this ruling should change - and the news may have a profound impact on donor recruitment, which is especially challenging in the U.K.

Founded just over a year ago, Altrui works with couples struggling with infertility who want to find an egg donor willing to help them conceive. Altruism is a rare, inspirational quality to have - and we are honoured and privileged to meet many such amazing women. Some have witnessed their own friends and relatives suffer through the pain and grief of childlessness. Some have read about it. Others simply tell us that donating their eggs is something that they have always wanted to do.

Unfortunately, many women simply do not realize that they can donate their eggs. By our estimates, there are hundreds, if not thousands, of fantastic young women in the U.K. who would donate if only they knew they could. Egg donation isn't for everyone, but we also know that many women would love to be able to help if they only knew how to go about it.

Can any woman donate her eggs?

A few requirements do exist. You need to be between 18 and 35 years old, fit and healthy and of average weight, with a BMI of less than 30. The biggest challenge we face at Altrui is getting the message out to women in this group that they can help give a childless couple the chance to experience a happy, healthy pregnancy. Just how powerful is that gift? We cannot express how much it means to our recipients except by quoting one of the people we found a donor for:

"Having a donor has changed our world in two very profound ways. Firstly, it allowed me the chance to conceive for the first time in my life, and take a step closer to our dreams - not just of holding our own baby, but actually having a noisy, maddening, loving family of our own to care about the rest of our lives together.

Secondly, the fact that this opportunity was given to us by an anonymous, altruistic donor makes it the most precious and powerful gift we will ever receive. I don't think that many donor recipients can ever reach the stage of seeking treatment without experiencing quite devastating disappointments over a journey that many have lasted several years. For me, this meant that I approached my treatment with a fair degree of fear. My donor's enthusiasm and bright positivity, her total commitment and unfailing responsibility to the treatment was something that lifted us up through the weeks. The fact that we had to trust a complete stranger implicitly - and that she never let us down - will have a lasting effect on me quite beyond any successful outcome.

Her kind and good actions have affected me deeply and I can quite honestly say that I look at the world around me, and the strangers that I encounter every day, in a different light because of what our donor has done for us."

So what is involved in being an egg donor?

Basically to be an egg donor you must:

- be over 18 and under 35,

- and in good health
- have no history in your family of hereditary disease or genetic disorders
- not be trying to get pregnant at the moment
- be within normal limits of weight for height and have a BMI of under 30.

Briefly you would go through a shortened IVF cycle which takes place over ten days. In a woman's normal monthly cycle a group of eggs grow in the ovary one of which becomes more mature than the rest and is shed in ovulation, and the group that are left behind are reabsorbed in the body. Being a donor the hormones that you are given are the same as you would naturally produce but a bit stronger, the purpose being to bring on this group of eggs to donate. As the majority of women have about 500,000 eggs in each ovary there should be plenty left for future children. Your fertility is not affected and the procedure to remove the eggs takes about 20 minutes, is painless and despite some reports, is minimally invasive. Most donors go home after an hour or so and back at work the next day, and some of our donors are happy to do this more than once. So if you would like to speak with someone who has been a donor you can find out from them what it was really like, just let us know. As Emma wrote: "Reading all about egg donation seemed a bit daunting but it was so easy when I did it. Everyone was so nice and kind and I am so pleased I was able to help. Everyone is really proud of me for what I did - me too!!"

If you would like to find out any more about how to become an egg donor, please call Alison on 01969 667875 or go to our website: www.altrui.co.uk/donors

Starting Our Family

I'VE ALWAYS WANTED to be a mother. My own mother is my best friend and I've longed to pass on the gift of love that she gave me. When I first met my husband, I knew that I'd finally found the right man - and he, too, was eager to start a family. I was so healthy and confident - I thought that getting pregnant would be easy. But I was wrong. We struggled. What should have been a joyous time for us, first as newlyweds and then as expectant parents, became tainted with sadness. As the months stretched into years and we searched for answers, I began to see a pattern emerging: I was not the first woman in my family to miscarry. My mother had lost several pregnancies; my older sister had lost almost every child she and her husband had ever conceived. Although none of my doctors suggested that something might be wrong with me, I began to suspect that I had a hidden problem. I asked for more tests - and that it how I found out that I have a rare, inherited genetic disorder that affects my fertility. At first, when I realized that I would probably never be able to conceive a healthy baby and carry a pregnancy to term, my heartbreak was overwhelming. But, in the midst of those dark months, my husband gently suggested that we might still be able to have a family if we found an egg donor. The idea terrified me at first, but as I walked to work every morning, I began noticing the women around me - young women, pregnant women, women with darling babies - and I realized that somewhere among them might be that one incredible individual whose generous heart would inspire her to step forward and become our egg donor. I'm not sure how to reach her, but I feel certain that she exists - and with her help, I may yet become the mother I long to be.

HERITAGE

Industrial past 'as important as castles and country homes'

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

ICONIC buildings standing as proud examples of engineering history are the focus of a major study into the condition of England's industrial heritage.

The research project by English Heritage includes a national poll showing that 80 per cent of people think such buildings are just as important as castles and country houses.

But problems for developers raising finance and lack of incentives to restore the buildings means many listed industrial sites are falling into disrepair.

Several Kent sites and buildings have been outlined as 'at risk' by English Heritage; the former working mast house and the boat store at Sheerness Dockyard; the South Darenth conservation area in Sevenoaks; and No 8 Machine Shop at Chatham Maritime.

English Heritage South East planning director Dr Andy Brown said at Sheerness work was being undertaken with owner Peel Ports to find a use for the two buildings.

"In most of these cases, if we can find a use for them they look after themselves," he said.

"We find that when they are not used they start on the slide to ruin. At Sheerness, roof tiles are slipping, which is a big problem because water gets in.

"The boat store is marginally

HISTORIC: Sheerness Dockyard (above and right), and No 1 Smithery at Chatham Dockyard are key parts of the landscape valued by the public more important than the mast house. There is really interesting space to be used."

Dr Brown said 40 per cent of the country's historical industrial buildings could be reused to house new advanced manufacturing businesses.

"However, 60 per cent won't attract businesses," he said. "Its future could be bleak, but people are passionate about our industrial past and since the 1960s there has been a strong tradition of groups taking on industrial preservation."

English Heritage is offering help to developers, owners and rescue groups.

One Kent heritage site being used as an example of what can be done is No 1 The Smithery at Chatham Historic Dockyard, which was saved from ruin by a partnership of Chatham Historic Dockyard Trust, the Imperial War Museum, and the National Maritime Museum.

For more than 400 years, the dockyard was the Navy's pre-eminent shipbuilding yard. But it fell into disrepair in the 1970s.

In 2003, following the formation of the rescue group, the shell was refurbished and a series of boxes constructed to house museum collections.

Dr Brown said: "This is an example of what can be done with imagination and effort."

Many partners contributed to the £13.5 million project, including the Heritage Lottery Fund which donated £5m.

NEWSPAPERS

KM pulls of out deal to buy rival titles

NEWSPAPER company the Kent Messenger Group has confirmed it has pulled out of a deal to buy a raft of titles owned by rival Northcliffe Media.

The announcement came as the Office of Fair Trading said it was to refer the acquisition to the Competition Commission after concluding the deal would result in areas of east Kent risking "costlier advertising for businesses and higher cover prices for readers".

But the KM said it would no longer be pursuing the deal for Kent Regional News and Media.

In a statement on its website, KM Group chair Geraldine Allinson said: "We have invested a huge amount of time on this project over the last few months.

"The costs and time required for a full Competition Commission review would be completely unreasonable for a business of our size and for a deal of this scale."

The move would have seen the KM snap up all its rival paid-for titles across East Kent – leaving its only competition as Archant KOS Media, publisher of this newspaper and the highly popular www.kentnews.co.uk.

Amelia Fletcher, the Office of Fair Trading's chief economist and decision maker in the case, said: "Local newspapers face significant challenges, including falling readership and increased competition from other media, most notably, the internet.

"However, this merger would create a monopoly in local weekly newspapers in several local areas across east Kent. UK merger law requires the OFT to be cautious in its 'first phase' review of mergers.

"We require compelling evidence to dismiss concerns that the combination of such close competitors as these might result in substantially higher prices or less choice for advertisers and readers. The evidence in this case did not permit us to clear this transaction."

COASTAL WEEK

Events to create a buzz up and down our coast

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

FOR centuries Kent's coastline has provided inspiration for artists and writers, from Turner to Dickens through to Margate's Tracey Emin.

Now Kent County Council is hoping the next generation will find that same inspiration by basing the theme of this year's Coastal Week on the Creative Coast.

Around 100 family activities – many of them free – are being hosted along the coastline, stretching from Dartford down to Dungeness, during half term week, October 22-30.

Creative workshops, beach art and literary walks are among the events taking place as well as Coastal Week favourites, such as the popular sea safari, where youngsters can travel out onto the Stour and beneath the white cliffs to see Kent's seal colony.

Coastal officer Chris Drake said KCC had teamed up with Turner Contemporary and other local organisations to host the creative-themed week.

"There are going to be lots of events going on up and down the coast; we've got something in every district from Dartford down to Shepway – not just the well-known stretches of coast but places like the north Kent marshes," he said.

"Each year we take on a different theme. Last year it was biodiversity, and this year, with Turner Contemporary as one of our main partners, we decided on a creative theme.

"Last year we had about 6,000 people attend across 100 events; although you can never predict the numbers, we hope it will increase to around 8,000 this year."

Mr Drake said although most of the visitors to Coastal Weeks were residents, tourism board Visit Kent was working to attract people from outside of the county.

"We had people coming from London last year. It's a bit of a showcase for Kent," he added.

To kick-start the launch of Creative Coast this weekend, a number of activities are being held in Whit-

ATTRACTION: Whitstable is one of the many areas set to host events stable Harbour, including a cartoon workshop where animators will show youngsters how to create sea characters.

There will also be stalls and entertainment on Sunday with local artists displaying and demonstrating their work.

Event organiser and co-ordinator of Kent's Creative Coast Campaign, Catriona Campbell, said: "There are so many opportunities to be creative in these coastal towns whatever the weather."

Representatives from organisations including Turner Contemporary, Whitstable's Horsebridge Arts Centre and Folkestone's Creative Foundation will be on hand to encourage visitors to be artistic.

Visit Kent chairman Amanda Cottrell added: "This year the many events on offer celebrate not only Kent's unrivalled and diverse coastline but also all the creative people who live near our renowned beaches and marshlands or are inspired by them."

The week, which was launched in 2007, is being funded this year by the European regional development Interreg programme, Southern Water and London Array.

TALKING POINT

REGENERATION

The art of economic

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

THE capacity of art to drive not only a cultural renaissance but economic regeneration continues to be a question debated in the corridors of power up and down the country.

And Kent is no different.

Unlike big business, it doesn't necessarily deliver a huge influx of jobs or industry. Yet its ability to attract an audience from far and wide, and perhaps most significantly, enhance the reputation of a town over time should not be underestimated.

In Tunbridge Wells, there is much discussion over the future use of a number of key sites. Amid much discussion about the direction of the town and decision-makers' gut feeling to enhance its retail offering, there is a growing chorus of voices calling for the town to promote the arts with new facilities which, in turn, can enhance its cosmopolitan atmosphere and create a hub for the creatives and a honey-pot for tourism.

With that debate showing

MODERN WORLD: The new state-of-the-art Marlowe Theatre is at the heart of Canterbury's answer to culture-led regeneration no sign of slowing, on the other side of the county there are some key examples of decisions made – and the benefits now being reaped.

Within the last few weeks, Canterbury has unveiled the £25.6m new Marlowe Theatre and with its glass frontage and modern auditorium, it is seen as an essential part of the city's cultural offering.

Meanwhile, in Margate, the archetypal run-down seaside town is in the early stages of a revival – with the catalyst being the Turner Contemporary, an art gallery which has already pulled in hundreds of thousands of visitors since opening in April.

It forms a key part in the effort to use culture as a driver for the town's regeneration.

Earlier this month Turner welcomed Rodin's iconic 'The Kiss' sculpture for a new exhibition, and the resulting national headlines would suggest it will keep those crowds flocking.

Culture and the economy

regeneration

Turner director Victoria Pomery said: "Culture-led regeneration has worked in the UK and right across Europe."

"In Liverpool and Birmingham they have really reinterpreted themselves through culture. In Liverpool they have not only got museums and galleries they have also embraced the whole Beatles and Merseybeat history."

The prospects for the Turner seem good. Visitor numbers are greater than predicted. Since it opened, 250,000 people have walked through its doors, dovetailing with a council-led strategy of encouraging a change in attitude of everyone in the town – even instructing taxi drivers to be warm, welcoming, and informative, to ensure the first-time visitor walks away with a strong sense of wanting to return soon.

Ms Pomery said: "Local people need to see amazing pieces of work on their doorstep. It helps in terms of civic pride."

Last week the gallery won Best Use of Arts and Culture at the national Regeneration and Renewal Awards.

Arts festivals also seem to be playing an increasing part in the social life of the county.

This summer saw the three-month Folkestone Triennial. The event is the flagship of the town's Creative Foundation charity. Since it began the foundation has redeveloped more than 60 buildings close to the town's harbour and around 100 artists use the buildings as studios in the Creative Quarter.

And it doesn't end there. More and more towns are seeking a boost through an arts festival; Whitstable's Biennale and the well-established Broadstairs and Tenterden folk festivals prove regular crowd pullers, while also engaging the local population.

Canterbury has long been recognised as a cultural beacon in the county – it has a rich history, and thriving universities inject a youthful vigour to off-set its status as a popular tourist destination.

"While the new Marlowe is a cornerstone to reinforcing its reputation, the city council is also investing heavily in the Beane Institute – a picture-postcard building in the main high street which will reopen in the spring as a revamped museum, library and art gallery.

The Marlowe itself is expected to generate around £22m in its first year for the local economy.

Of course, all this investment, while admirable, is now more difficult than ever to justify given the squeeze on the public purse.

Cllr John Gilbey, leader of Canterbury council, explains: "More than 140 people are being employed by the theatre; its economic impact will be huge. Canterbury has always been a city of culture."

"People will be able to come here from around east Kent and beyond rather than having to spend money travelling to London. Its prospects are very good."

ART: Rodin's The Kiss is now at Turner Contemporary

In Ashford, the council and Church of England have collaborated to spend £1.7m to turn St Mary's Church into a performance venue for visiting acts. Town chiefs hope it will help revive its town centre.

Ms Pomery said in a financial downturn, culture could help to get the economy back on its feet.

She added: "Things like this not only stimulate the economy they stimulate the feel-good factor. In an economic downturn people need things that create optimism."

"Creativity is very important in terms of the economy. Young people need to develop creative skills. Culture in a recession needs to be more ambitious than in the good times."

STUNNING:

From big white dresses to bridal underwear, even including a selection of outfits for guests, The Wedding Show hosted by Claire Sweeney was a resounding success and inspiration for brides and grooms-to-be

THE WEDDING SHOW

Happy couples' big day

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

ORGANISERS, guests and visitors at last weekend's Wedding Show at Leeds Castle have hailed the event a huge success.

An amazing range of weddings styles were unveiled at the prestigious surroundings of Leeds Castle, with TV sensation Claire Sweeney on hand to present stunning catwalk fashion shows.

The two-day Wedding Show was staged by Archant KOS Media, publisher of this newspaper.

Luxury honeymoon holidays were on offer in a number of free prize draws, as well as a superb opportunity for grooms to arrive at the ceremony in the famous DeLorean time travelling car as featured in the Back to the Future films.

More than 100 exhibitors showed off photography, culinary skills, dresses, men's attire and a host of other wedding related-services.

Musicians entertained the crowds, and there was a charity casino and demonstrations from a magician. But the centrepiece was the catwalk show which featured stunning models, amazing attire, and superb choreography.

Claire Sweeney, attending her first wedding fair, said the show was an amazing success and an inspiration to those about to tie the knot.

"I really enjoyed it," she said. "There were some amazing outfits on show and the event put everyone in the right mood for a wedding."

"Girls are coming here when they about to get married so there's excitement in the air, a real joie de vivre."

"The clothes were so beautiful on the girls and the boys on the catwalk looked great as well."

"I'd do this again in a heartbeat."

Claire also praised the variety on offer for couples and their guests who are looking forward to their big days.

SAFETY

Fire drill proves airport is prepared for an emergency

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

THESE dramatic images of fire crews tackling a blaze at Biggin Hill Airport were captured as the airport underwent a full scale emergency drill.

Held every two years and code-named Operation Jubilee, the exercise involves a simulated crash and tests the response time and performance of the airport's fire service and local emergency services.

As part of the drill, a redundant aircraft fuselage is set ablaze at an undisclosed location in the airport.

Volunteers play the role of passengers and crew who are made up with artificial blood and wounds that simulate crash injuries and burns. For this simulation, three passengers were declared dead, 14 injured and eight uninjured.

Programmed in real time over a period of four hours, the fire and emergency services were monitored on time taken to the accident scene, quelling the fire, manning the accident scene, handling of casualties, establishing and operating a survivor centre and inter-agency liaison.

Senior airport fire officer Andy Mellers said: "This exercise provided a valuable opportunity to test the airport fire service and the vital relationships across the full range of local emergency services that individually play a key role.

"Overall, the exercise has been judged successful — though there will be some aspects where lessons will have been learned for future honing of these vital safety drills."

FAVOURITE HAUNTS: A ghostly black dog is said to stalk the countryside around Leeds Castle

Things are still going bump in the Kent night

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE phantom of Charles Dickens searching for his grave in Rochester, a spectral Spitfire roaring over Biggin Hill, and a column of ghostly Roman legionnaires marching to Richborough are all detailed in a new book.

Ghost hunter Rupert Matthews has been exploring tales of spooks across the county and his work The Haunted Places of Kent is out in time for Halloween.

"This is one of a series of books I have written and researched and it was among the easiest for one reason," he said.

"In contrast to other counties, wherever I went there were stories of ghosts. In a book like this you need to get a story from almost every place in the county to appeal to as many people as possible.

"Wherever I went in Kent and said what I was doing people would say 'oh you mean the white lady' or 'that's the black monk'. Not only are there ghosts all over Kent, people are willing to talk about them."

Kent's stories also include the apparition of a young Horatio Nelson striding across Chatham's naval dockyards, the spectre of a man mysteriously peering into cars in Broomhill Road, Tunbridge Wells, and a ghost who haunts the Theatre Royal, Margate.

Others include the haunting of Canterbury Cathedral by Archbishop Simon of Sudbury who was hacked to death during the Peasants' Revolt, the sighting of Count Louis Zerbrowski and his famous Chitty, Chitty, Bang, Bang car round the lanes of Patricxbourne, the headless drummer boy who walks the battlements of Dover Castle and numerous ghosts at Pluckley, said to be the most haunted village in England.

GHOSTBUSTER: Rupert Matthews has a new book out

The Black Dog of Leeds is one of the more famous spectral animals in Kent and there are many tales associated with it.

According to legend, the Black Dog of Leeds is linked to another supernatural resident of Leeds Castle, a 15th century Duchess of Gloucester. This lady was found guilty of witchcraft, heresy and necromancy at a time when courts treated such crimes seriously.

Being aunt to King Henry VI, however, saved the lady's life and she was sentenced to life imprisonment at Leeds Castle instead of death. The duchess had been in residence only a few months when the Black Dog began to roam the surrounding countryside. It was widely reported the spectral hound was the evil familiar of the witch – her eyes and ears in the locality.

In time the duchess passed away but the dog remained and bad luck followed in its wake to all who saw it.

The book says the owners of Leeds Castle are dismissive of the legend. Marian Strachan, who works at the castle, declared in 2003: "We frequently receive enquiries about ghosts. I'm sorry we can't be of more help but as far as we know, stories about the black dog are just stories".

Mr Matthews has made the collection of ghost stories his life-long interest and is a member of the Society of Psychical Research and the Ghost Club.

But has he ever seen a ghost? "My answer to that question is, I'm not sure," he said. "I classify ghost sightings and if someone sees something out of the corner of their eye they cannot explain I call that a 'probable'."

"In my own case – and I've investigated over 1,000 reputed hauntings, I was in a Thorn-ton shop in Chester where a lady in a long green dress dating from around 1880 was reputed to haunt.

"I was upstairs in the manager's office when I saw what looked like a woman – wearing a long dress – pass the door. When we'd finished the manager said he was ready to lock up and I asked about the person upstairs.

"He said there was no-one in the building but us but went to make sure anyway. It turned out the place was empty."

Foreign markets offer lifeline

As businesses battle tough economic times Jo James, chief executive at Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, sees exports as the future for many companies

IT SEEMS that there can be no good news about the economy, either national or worldwide, at present.

As I write, the latest blow is inflation at 5.2 per cent, the highest for three years, which comes on top of so many discouraging statistics and pessimistic forecasts – it makes you wonder if there will ever be a substantial recovery.

Could it be we are looking at a situation in which a really major change in our economic system is going to be necessary to alleviate the problem?

Many people are beginning to think that way.

The Occupy Wall Street movement, demanding radical change in the world economic structure, has developed into an international phenomenon, with protests taking place in cities throughout the world.

These protestors are by no means confined to any lunatic fringe, they are drawn from all sections of society, with some support coming from economists and multi-millionaire entrepreneurs.

Is the free market economy (or capitalism, or vested-interest economy, or whatever your chosen term) in free-fall?

Personally, I doubt it, given the resilience of the system over the last 10,000 years.

Rightly or wrongly, it is what has driven our economy throughout the development of what we call modern human civilisation and will likely continue to do so, albeit perhaps with some changes.

I do believe there will be changes, and they are likely to be beneficial in the long term. In the meantime we all have to struggle with the existing circumstances and make the best of what we have available to us.

For businesses, this probably just means more of the same that we have doing for the last few years: cutting costs and improving efficiency wherever possible, taking advantage of any opportunities that do exist, and exploiting the versatility of entrepreneurial spirit.

The business community, after all, is the driver of the free market economy, and epitomises all the resilience the market has displayed over those 10,000 years.

Many Kent businesses are already taking advantage of our favourable position and existing overseas links to build their export potential.

There is little doubt that exporting will play an increasing role in building our economy, especially as the domestic market is likely to remain sluggish in the short term. There is a huge potential market for all manner of products and services, on our doorstep in Europe and worldwide, and many businesses in Kent have the facility to exploit that market.

Kent Invicta Chamber offers

Could it be we are looking at a major change to our economic situation?

support systems for exporters, and has, for instance, recently become involved in a new international trade service to help Kent exporters gain a greater insight and access to the Chinese market.

The British Chambers of Commerce and UK Trade and Industry are actively involved in helping companies in exporting, and Archant KOS Media's Business Week Live at Dover Exhibition Center on Wednesday, October 26, has an international theme.

Kent Invicta Chamber enthusiastically supports all these initiatives, and, whilst urging the Government to take all necessary measures to strengthen the domestic economy, also urges businesses to look hard at the potential of export markets.

KOS COMMENT

NHS must learn to deal with complaints

HEALTH trust have been in the spotlight for all the wrong reasons recently; last week for binning thousands of untouched meals, and now for the high number of complaints referred to the Ombudsman.

In this latest case, what is evident – aside from the appalling number of complaints – is the apparent inability for the NHS to deal with patient gripes.

Not only does this mean small issues get blown out of proportion, but being sent to a parliamentary body for consideration means more time and money spent, of which both could be put to better use elsewhere in the NHS.

Tory rebels are facing a painful weekend

IT will be an unsettled weekend for our Tory backbenchers as they prepare for the EU referendum vote on Monday.

Most uncomfortable will be the ones planning to defy David Cameron's three-line whip and vote for a referendum.

Having party enforcers twisting their arms might test their rebellious streak.

Now they ask for our views

John Adams, Labour councillor for Stone, tries to make political capital out of the increase in tolls at Dartford Crossing, yet I didn't notice his party being too concerned about the charges when they were in power (Letters, October 16).

As the tunnel is reported to be in foreign ownership, I'd imagine there is not a lot that can be done to regulate prices, as I can't imagine the sale included any price agreements. Why ever would politicians bite the hands that feed them and upset the companies that provide their directorships and 'moonlighting' jobs?

During Labour's rule, they kept telling us they would listen to us and get us involved with decision making, but ignored us at every turn. Now, all of a sudden, when they need cannon fodder to further their political aims, they're very interested in our views. We weren't all born yesterday.

Phil Granger, West Malling

Tolls opinion is too late

I agree in principle with John Adams in his comments last week, in that the tolls for the Dartford Crossing should have been scrapped years ago.

However, I would like to point out to him that it was his party who were in Government at the time, who initially reneged on the deal to scrap the toll charges when the Elizabeth II Bridge was paid for, by way of toll charges.

Furthermore, it was also Labour who did not scrap the toll charges, but was actually the first to raise them.

Why is it that when political parties are in opposition, they are full of ideas and suggestions, but when the time arrives for them to govern, they conveniently find excuses for not putting those ideas into being?

Labour had their chance to do something when they were in government, so please Mr Adams, do us all a favour, give us all a rest and stop banging on about them now.

Derek L Ashford, Folkestone

Schools can co-operate

Your readers, especially those involved in the education sector, may be interested to learn that a co-operative model for converter academies has recently received approval from the Department for Education.

The co-operative academy model was developed in partnership with a group of co-operative trust schools who wanted to pursue academy status in view of the additional freedoms and funding available.

The model provides a mechanism for a mutual support network of schools through the Schools Co-operative Society – a group owned and democratically controlled by co-operative schools and supported by the Co-operative Group and the Co-operative College.

Many schools which are currently members of co-operative trusts are working towards achieving co-operative academy status.

The Co-operative College offers a package of services to support schools throughout the process of conversion and I would urge school governors to check out their website or to contact schools@co-op.ac.uk.

If your school has already converted to an academy using the standard articles it can convert to the co-operative model – and become part of a growing network.

Gay marriage 'unacceptable'

I am bemused by the attitude of politicians to the concept of Broken Britain.

The Labour Party will not admit the problem exists (probably because they caused the problem with numerous pieces of legislation that have undermined the moral and ethical values of our nation).

Now we have the Conservative Party (probably as a result of pressure from the Liberal Democrats) wanting to continue the process by the introduction of gay marriage. This is totally unacceptable.

I am convinced the Liberal Democrats are largely to blame, because of the attitude of Dr Bullion (the LD candidate) at the hustings meeting in Sevenoaks URC during last year's election campaign.

A question was asked about counselling for people with unwanted same sex attraction who, by definition, would like to have counselling about moving away from homosexuality but in the current political climate are likely to be offered only counselling that would push them back into homosexuality.

Dr Bullion wanted an example of this type of attitude. That was strange because another questioner had already given such an example concerning a large public-sector London employer that had refused (for precisely this reason) to continue to accept chaplaincy services that had been provided by the London City Mission for many years to the organisation concerned.

It has to be said that many of us are fed up with double standards in this area, and something needs to be done to put this right.

Stephen Johnson
Seal, Sevenoaks

The 'teachers' need to learn

Point of fact 'Cops in Kabul' (Letters, October 16). Somebody has to train these people, but why it has to be Kent Police is a good point.

Especially as the majority haven't a clue as to the Afghan requirements. Policing in such countries is a mix at best, yet cannot be compared to that required in the UK. Religious aspects take the lead, as do military elements, whereas human rights stagger behind.

The reality is if you don't have experience in such lands you're not fit as a trainer. This has proven itself globally for decades because they revert back anyway. It's more a case of educating the trainer beforehand than dictating what will never result. It takes more than just a UK badge, and we should have more cops on Kent streets.

As for Mike Eddy's blaming-the-Government-spin again (Opinion, October 16). He forgets it's his Labour Party that failed to get a new hospital built for Dover in how many years? It's time he stopped his blame-all-but-his-own attitude and did something for all.

We want a fully fitted international standard hospital, just like a birthing unit is paramount. All this waffle related to Ashford or Margate puts lives in danger every day. It can take an hour or more to get to both these hospitals. Why even Canterbury can take more than 30 minutes sometimes.

Connaught Barracks is the best option for such, even a university hospital is feasible. The Pfizer site would have been even better.

Let's get it sorted and stop the waffle and excuses.

Derek R Packham, Deal

My bank cut me off without explanation

Q RECENTLY I called Vodafone to top up my mobile phone, but my debit card was rejected by my bank. I checked that my account was in credit, and then I had an interview at the bank. I was told the bank's security department had blocked my account as a security measure. This could have had serious results if I had needed my debit card urgently. Surely it must be illegal for a bank to do this without contacting the customer?

A WHAT your bank did is not a crime, but it could be a breach of contract. It is certainly no way to treat a customer. But the bank's explanation raises more questions than it answers. What made the security department block your account in the first place? Had someone tried to steal your identity perhaps, and gain access to your money? And for how long was it blocked – a day, a week, longer? If the bank does not come up with a decent explanation, then you appear to have an ironclad case for going to the Financial Ombudsman (0800 023 4567), who can award compensation.

Q I HAVE a couple of small shareholdings that I bought in privatisation issues more than 20 years ago. I would like to gift them to my grandson. They are worth less than £2,000 together, so no tax would be due. How do I go about this? Do I need a solicitor?

A YOU need a stock transfer form, which the registrar of each company should be able to provide. Or, if you have access to the internet, just Google and you will find business websites offering cheap downloads of the form. Complete it and submit it to the registrar, and the shares will belong to your grandson. You should not need professional help.

Q I HAVE credit card debts of £6,000. Internet advertisements say lots of debts can be erased through an individual voluntary arrangement (IVA), if I pay a debt manager. Is this true?

A THIS could work, but there is a downside. Basically, the debt management firm will negotiate with your card company, promising regular payments from you for anything up to five years in return for a reduction in the sum you owe. But there are charges, and you are almost certain to lose any credit cards you have. The agreement will be on your credit agency file for the next six years and could stop you getting any further credit. Avoid this if you can. At least talk to a debt advisor at Citizens Advice or the Consumer Credit Counselling

TONY HETHERINGTON
MONEY CLINIC

Service (0800 138 1111). Their services are free.

Q PLEASE settle an argument. There have been protests about the new 50pc top tax rate, but I am sure there was a time when it was more than 90pc. My friend says this is impossible.

A THE highest income tax rates I can find in modern times were in the 1970s. The top rate of income tax was 83pc on earnings, and 98pc on savings income. And yes, there were protests then, too.

Q MY wife's parents originally purchased their house for £20,000. Subsequently, they transferred it into the names of their son and two daughters – without their knowledge – at a nominal value of £40,000. There is now talk of them wishing to sell the property, now worth £140,000. What is the tax situation for my wife, her sister and brother, as the property is not their home?

A WHAT A mess! Your wife's parents created a capital gains tax liability unnecessarily. If they had made wills leaving the house to their children, this would have sidestepped a tax bill since no gains tax is due on assets left on death. On the face of things, it will be the three children who make any sale as they are the legal owners. They must find out the real market value of the property when it was transferred to them, unless it was before March 31, 1982, in which case it is the value at that date that counts. Anything above this is a gain. There is tax relief for expenses such as estate agent's fees. There is also relief if any of the three children has made a loss on other investments. And we are all allowed a certain amount of annual gains tax free – currently £10,600. The net gain is then taxed at 18pc or 28pc, depending on your overall income. Frankly, it would be worth spending some money to see whether a solicitor can find a legal defect in the transfer of the property by the parents. If it can be held still to be theirs, that would avoid a lot of tax.

Win £1,000 in our consumer survey

By Ed Foss

MyMoney 24 writer

A CHEQUE for £1,000 could be on its way to you if you take part in this year's MyMoney24 consumer survey.

Run in conjunction with financial data providers Moneyfacts.co.uk, the simple survey gives you the opportunity to have your say about which financial providers offer the best service. Whether you have enjoyed exemplary service from your current account provider or have been impressed with how your travel insurance provider dealt with a claim, here is your chance to give them the kudos you think they deserve.

Moneyfacts has researched the market by assessing providers and products on their technical merit – but, of course, a good interest rate or a low fee can mean very little if the customer is then subjected to poor service.

So now is your chance to look at

This survey is the perfect opportunity for consumers to have their say...

SYLVIA WAYCOT, MONEYFACTS GROUP

the Moneyfacts shortlist and decide which of the providers have treated you well.

Entering is easy – and everyone who completes the survey by visiting www.mymoney24.co.uk will be entered into a draw to win £1,000.

"This survey is the perfect opportunity for consumers to have their say on the financial products that are important to them, whether that be a credit card, an Isa or pet insurance," said Sylvia Waycot, publishing director at Moneyfacts Group.

"As well as making their voices heard, everybody voting in the survey stands a chance of winning £1,000 – a welcome boost at such a challenging time."

The 20 categories include best pet insurance provider, best car insurance provider, best travel money provider, best home insurance provider, best energy provider, best high-street mortgage provider, best credit card provider, and best current account provider.

The survey will run until November 25, with the lucky £1,000 winner being announced in January.

The financial providers that win the survey will be unveiled at a glitzy ceremony taking place in London early next year.

Take care of your tyres to avoid the fines

MOTORISTS who fail to take proper care of their tyres face fines of up to £10,000 and could see any insurance claims denied.

Each defective or bald tyre could see a driver hit with a fine of up to £2,500 and three penalty points, meaning four dodgy tyres on a car could lead to a five-figure fine and 12 penalty points.

A poll of drivers carried out by Confused.com found that about six people in 10 did not know that the correct tread depth for their tyres was 1.6mm, and a similar number of people did not know what the correct pressure was.

"Tyre maintenance may not sound like the most exciting topic on the planet but it is important for basic road safety," said Gareth Kloet, head of car insurance at Confused. "If your tyres have too much air or too little, this can wear the tread of tyres down quickly. If a tyre has a tread of less than 1.6mm it is qualified as an illegal tyre. If the police stop someone, they will be fined up to £2,500 for each illegal tyre."

"If someone is in a crash and their tyres are below the legal tread limit, a fine can be issued, causing their insurance to be denied."

IT'S SAFETY

FIRST: Keep an eye on your tyres or it could cost you dearly in fines, and also negate your insurance

Firm has certain chemistry for ex Pfizer workers

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

HIGHLY-QUALIFIED workers who lost their jobs when Pfizer announced it was to pull out of east Kent have been taken on by a science-based business that is moving to the county.

Creabilis SA, a European biotechnology company specialising in the development of treatments for dermatology, inflammation and pain, is in the process of locating near Canterbury.

The site at Womenswold will be responsible for the clinical development of the company's portfolio of new drugs.

And the company's most recent additions to its senior management include Dr David Roblin, James Sandy, Alex Leech and Dr Peter Spargo, all of whom had previously worked at Pfizer's UK headquarters in Sandwich.

The loss of the Pfizer plant was a major blow to the economy of east Kent and its ramifications are set to be discussed by Labour's shadow skills minister Gordon Marsden MP at the upcoming Business Week Live event, to be held at the Dover Exhibition Centre on Wednesday (October 26).

Creabilis recently raised £13 million in funding from a number of investors, led by Abbott Biotech Ventures and including NeoMed and Sofinnova Partners, as well as Italian investors.

These funds have supported establishment of the new Kent site and will be used to further advance the Creabilis pipeline, including its lead product CT327, a treatment for psoriasis and atopic dermatitis that is in Phase II clinical trials.

Dr Eliot Forster, chief executive of

CUTTING EDGE: Creabilis SA has opened a site at Womenswold, near Canterbury

Creabilis, said: "Our decision to establish a presence in Kent is testimony to the quality of industry professionals we believe the region attracts, as well as its exceptionally strong links with the international pharmaceutical industry."

"We look forward to playing an active part in continuing the county's tradition as a centre of excellence for innovative businesses as we advance our products."

Paul Wookey, chief executive of Locate in Kent, the county's investment promotion agency, said: "We are delighted that Creabilis has decided to locate its UK operations in Kent as it reinforces the region's reputation for being at the forefront of the biotechnology and pharmaceutical industries not just in the UK but internationally, and its ability to attract companies of the highest calibre to establish here."

Timber supplier picks up top website award

A NEW website by Howarth Timber & Building Supplies has been named best in the business by the timber industry's leading trade magazine.

In an event at London's Grand Connaught Rooms, the Dartford supplier was named winner of Website Of The Year category in the Timber Trades Journal Awards for 2011.

The award was judged independently by industry experts and presented to Howarth Timber's Neale Brewster by TV property expert Sarah Beeny.

"This is the accolade we wanted," said Mr Brewster. "Our industry has recognised that we have an impressive presence on the internet."

Commenting on the award, the judging panel said: "The Howarth Timber Group is a perfect example of a company embracing the web to effectively promote its brand, services and products. A deserving winner."

Mr Brewster said: "Our web-development team have worked extremely hard and their efforts have now been rewarded in the best possible way."

With 28 branches throughout the UK, the company is part of The Howarth Timber Group, the UK's largest privately-owned timber business.

INVESTMENT

New bank-backed growth fund to give companies a financial boost

IN a move to stimulate economic growth, expanding businesses across the county are being offered the opportunity to obtain private-sector funding via a new source of cash – first announced last autumn.

The Business Growth Fund is aimed at assisting companies with turnover between £5 million and £50m who are looking to fund their growth with between £2m and £10m of equity capital.

The BGF is a new investment fund, launched in April and backed by five of the UK's biggest banks with the object of stimulating growth in the economy by driving local deals and offering ongoing support.

Independent of Government, the fund has up to £2.5

billion available to invest.

It has been designed to plug the gap between venture capital and private-equity investment in the £2m-£10m range and, where appropriate, it will work with other funders.

Sectors in which the BGF is particularly interested include hi-tech, niche manufacturing industries, software and electronics, tourism and leisure, healthcare and life sciences, business services, specialist retail and IT.

The fund was announced almost 12 months ago and has attracted some criticism for moving slowly.

The BGF has so far invested £4.2m for a minority stake in Benefex, a provider of online employee reward and benefit schemes.

CAREERS

Hotel fair will focus on tourism sector

TOURISM and hospitality businesses from across Kent have the chance to meet the sector's workers of the future at a careers fair in November.

Taking place at the Pegwell Bay Hotel, Ramsgate, on Monday, November 28, the Tourism Careers Fair will give employers the chance to mix with students from schools and colleges across Thanet and Canterbury with an interest in a job in the industry.

The fair will feature guest speakers including Charles Buchanan, chief executive at Manston airport, and Frank Thorley, founder and chairman of Thorley Taverns.

"This is a great opportunity for employers to meet young people who are genuinely interested in a career in tourism and hospitality in a relaxed and informal setting," said Kerstin Andrews, head of training at Visit Kent. "It's a great entry-level career in a sector that is vitally important to the future economy of Thanet."

There are places still available for any businesses that would like to exhibit. For more information, phone Farah Miri-Meziane on 07920 792319 or alternatively email farah.mirimeziane@kent.gov.uk.

OPTIMISM: Manston airport

What is the outlook for our airports?

WITH some of the South East's major airports working at near-capacity, and the Government ruling out expansion at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted, what is the outlook for the region's passengers and businesses?

Charles Buchanan, chief executive of Manston airport in Thanet, will be speaking at Business Week Live, examining the options, the challenges and the opportunities.

He says that with Lydd's expansion the subject of a public inquiry, and proposals for a Thames-estuary airport facing huge opposition from local people and environmental groups, Manston could be well placed to meet increasing demand for runway capacity.

Buchanan will put forward the case for the growth of the airport and explain how, by attracting more scheduled passenger and freight airlines, it would welcome 2.2 million passengers and 167,000 tonnes of freight a year by 2018.

A recent economic-impact study estimated that the Kent airport could deliver almost £65 million gross value-added a year to the local economy by 2018 if its master plan for development was realised and create more than 2,000 jobs for east Kent and a further 1,000 in the wider economy.

Sustainable practices to help build the future of your firm

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE issue of sustainability is set to be tackled at the upcoming Business Week Live 2011 conference, to be held at the Dover Cruise Exhibition Centre on Wednesday October 26.

Duncan Murray, managing director of Ashford company Directline Structures, which designs and builds steel-framed structures to sectors including education, retail and recreational units and industrial buildings, will be pointing out its benefits.

He said: "In the current tough economic climate, sustainability is not exactly at the top of a company's agenda – in fact, can anyone afford to go down the sustainable route at the moment?"

"To which I say: 'Can anyone afford not to adopt a sustainable approach to building?'. It's not a gimmick or a fad, it is common sense and it will save you money."

He continued: "For any business considering a new building – a retail unit, warehouse, school, care home or sports hall – the prospect of saving around 30 per cent on the cost of the project must be hugely appealing."

"A sustainable building can be cost-effective, good-looking and a pleasant place to work. It can also benefit from lower running costs – all of which further enhances the long-term value of the building."

"By adopting lean design and construction methods and waste avoidance, businesses make dramatic savings in materials and so save costs, without cutting corners."

"Call it sustainable, call it green and eco-friendly, but also call it efficient and plain good value. In short, it's the best possible way to save money and end up with the building you want at a price you can afford. So how is this achieved?"

Mr Murray said advice could steer companies in the right direction.

He said: "Choose an expert, whether it's a consultant or a contractor company that can provide a complete service. If you don't know what you want, then a consultant can steer you through the main decision – if you do know what you want, the best value comes with a design-and-build service, one that can take a project from concept to design, through the planning process, construction and fit-out to handover.

STRUCTURE: Duncan Murray is urging people to look at sustainable building

"By avoiding layers of consultants, the costs involved and loss of control that split responsibilities can cause, savings can be made – as much as 30 per cent."

"Lean design has a major part to play in this."

By understanding the disciplines of structural design and building detailing, the construction process and the costs of all stages and elements, big savings are made in raw materials. That's simply good, sustainable design, but it also has an immediate cost benefit to clients and a dramatic CO2 reduction."

"What the client ends up with is a well-designed, flexible, cost-effective building built for the purpose it was intended, all within budget."

It's not always a good thing to multi-task

BUSINESS-OWNERS are spreading themselves too thin by taking on so many different roles within their own company, according to research by invoice finance specialist Bibby Financial Services.

The region's owners and managers are well aware that wearing a range of different hats is par for the course. However, according to the survey, many are regularly being forced into taking on other duties in addition to traditional roles such as recruitment, securing finance and marketing.

The research found that more than three-quarters (78 per cent) of business-owners in the region are being drawn into chasing late payments, while 70 per cent regularly have to buy office supplies. Furthermore, 45 per cent are regularly collecting and making deliveries and, surprisingly, almost two-thirds even help out with the cleaning (62 per cent).

At a time when they should be focused on identifying growth areas for their business as well as maintaining a healthy cash flow, increasing orders and boosting sales, the findings by Bibby Financial Services suggest the Kent business-owner of today is actually an extreme multi-tasker.

Jon Charsley, Bibby Financial

Services spokesman for the South East, said: "There is a real danger that South East firms may suffer if owners and managers continue to shoulder all the responsibility for the operation of their business."

"It is of particular concern that many in the region are spending so much time chasing customer payments and dealing with suppliers, possibly at the expense of tasks that are really going to help their business grow, such as securing new business."

"Working closely with many business-owners and managers in the South East, we understand the pressures they are under, and that they often have to take on many different roles to make their business a success. We aim to alleviate some of these pressures and free up their time to concentrate on running and growing their business."

BANKING ON IT: The 74-acre Rochester Riverside site is part of the Thames Gateway regeneration

Developer begins first phase in exciting £8.7m riverside regeneration

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

DENNE, part of the Leadbitter Group, has started work on a £8.7 million development on behalf of The Hyde Group as part of the regeneration of Rochester Riverside.

The planned regeneration of Rochester Riverside, currently a 74-acre brownfield site, is one of the most exciting and highly-anticipated regeneration projects in the Thames Gateway.

Phase 1 of the development, which is supported by a £4.6 million affordable-housing grant from the Homes and Community Agency, will involve Denne delivering a 41-bed extra-care home, 32 one- and two-bedroom flats for rent and shared ownership, and one retail unit.

The new homes will be constructed using a traditional timber and concrete frame and will incorporate solar photovoltaic panels on the roof. They will also be delivered in accordance with the Green Charter.

Published by Medway Council, the charter aims to ensure Rochester Riverside exceeds the latest Government regulations on sustainability, including requirements on water usage, carbon emissions, sustainable building materials, recycling and waste management.

All of this means the project is targeted to achieve Code for Sustainable Homes Level 3 and a BREEAM (BRE Environmental Assessment Method) 'very good' rating.

"We have worked tirelessly to get the design, materials and features right before the contract was signed," said Mike Finch, assistant director of development at Hyde.

"People will be able to move into the new homes as early as December 2013."

Graham Brown, managing director at Denne, said: "We are delighted to be the first contractor to commence work on phase 1 of the Rochester Riverside development."

"This is a key project in the wider regeneration of sites along the River Medway and will mean so much to the people of the historic town of Rochester. We are sure that the facilities we are providing will be a fantastic start to this wonderful project."

Company uses bright idea to save big sun of money

SOLAR power is considered by some to be kinder to the environment and it can save people money.

Now a company from Kent is about to practise what it preaches – and sells – after gaining planning permission to build a solar photovoltaic (PV) system that will generate enough solar power to run 12 average-sized homes.

However, it's not homes on this occasion that the ground-mounted solar array will power – it's The Green Home Company's offices in Coxheath, near Maidstone.

Once completed, the solar installation will slash the amount of electricity the firm's offices use – and reduce its carbon footprint, too.

Green Home Company managing director Alan Proto said: "It's fantastic news for everyone, really. We are delighted to be able to use the same solar panels we sell to residential and commercial clients across the South East, to reduce our electricity bills and lower our CO<sub>2</sub> emissions at the same time."

The 50kWp ground-mounted solar array will be built next to The Green Home Company's offices. It will offset 23 tonnes of CO<sub>2</sub> every year.

The project, which will be worth some £350,000, is seen as a sound investment in the future of The Green Home Company and the environment. The development should take no longer than eight weeks to complete and will be in place before February next year.

Proto said: "As long as there is daylight, the panels will produce electricity. They will generate at full capacity when it is a clear, sunny day.

"It's really cost-effective for us to put this in place as we can do it ourselves and we, as well as the environment, benefit from it. It's taken nearly a year to get planning permission, but it is well worth it from our point of view."

The Green Home Company installs solar panels onto domestic and commercial premises in Kent and across the South East.

It also operates a scheme by which residents can have solar panels fitted for free if their roof is south-facing, the correct size and unshaded.

Using its own installers, The Green Home Company is a top-10 UK solar installation company. It is also a major local employer, having recruited more than 100 people in Kent over the last 12 months.

The company was created in September 2009 and was the brainchild of Proto, who lives near Sevenoaks.

Spotting the increasing need for and popularity of solar energy, he decided to start a business dedicated to installing solar panels, adding it to his portfolio of already-successful construction businesses.

Since January 2010, the company has carried out more than 300 installations across the South East, with 58 systems sold in August 2011 alone.

The company has fitted some 5,000 panels since it began trading, producing between them around one megawatt of power each year.

PICK OF THE BUNCH: The Green Home Company's Orchard House offices in Maidstone will soon be powered by solar panels erected by the company

It's jobs for Kent

Why Jobs24 is the best choice for employment

EMPLOYERS and recruitment specialists are set to benefit from the relaunch of the JobsForKent website as Jobs24.co.uk, providing a range of new opportunities for businesses to reach the perfect candidates.

The new site boasts a number of special features that will make the process of reaching target-users more effective, including enhanced job listings which make vacancies stand out and appear higher up the search results page.

'Hot Jobs' on the Jobs24.co.uk homepage is another highly-effective option for ensuring vacancies are seen by local jobseekers, while the 'Featured Jobs' section provides another point of publicity.

The successful 'CV Match' service, which gives employers the opportunity to communicate with more than 140,000 jobseekers, has been updated and improved. It now features improved search technology and advanced user search options, ensuring each vacancy will find its relevant audience.

In addition, the launch of the Jobs24 mobile site (m.jobs24.co.uk), which is accessible from any mobile smart phone, means users can look for their next job and be kept informed of the latest vacancies while on the move.

Meanwhile, the Jobs24 homepage shows the latest jobs-related news on a special feed from the Archant KOS Media newsroom, while also offering a careers advice section with CV guides, interview techniques and other tools.

Local employers who want to have a more permanent presence on the site can also have a company profile, which provides a directory listing and logo on the homepage.

The move to Jobs24 is being backed by a major marketing campaign, all designed to drive jobseekers to their new local recruitment website of choice.

Archant KOS Media telephone sales manager Fawad Minhas said: "I am really excited by the opportunities our new site offers employers, agencies and jobseekers.

"We can now offer even more effective methods for reaching relevant jobseekers and differentiate our clients' vacancies.

"Our new online and mobile sites ensure Jobs24 remains the leading platform for advertisers to place their vacancies and for users to find the right job."

Industry digging for farmers of the future

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

A CAREERS fair was held to promote the enjoyment of working in the Garden of England's agricultural industries.

The Farming Futures event – organised by Kent County Council in partnership with Kent County Agricultural Society and the Godinton Trust – was attended by more than 500 young people aged 14-19 at the Kent Showground in Detling, near Maidstone.

They had the opportunity to find out about arable and livestock farming, food production, and woodland and countryside management, as well as veterinary and animal care, engineering, and more.

Representatives from agricultural businesses, colleges and apprenticeship providers were also on hand to discuss course options and help students decide on their future career prospects.

KCC cabinet member for education, learning and skills Cllr Mike Whiting, said there were numerous opportunities for school-leavers, with 50,000 jobs available over the next 15 years in the agricultural and land-based sector.

He added: "It is fantastic to see a resurgence in agriculture and farming careers. The traditions that made this county great need the next generation to come through.

"There are so many opportunities in this industry and we are keen to champion them.

"Through the Farming Futures event, students were able to see all the courses and job options available to them."

Farming Futures is one of the council's 'careers master classes', which give young people the chance to find out more about a range of vocational careers including hands-on activities organised by industry professionals.

Kent County Agricultural Society director Roz Day said: "Farming Futures was a hugely important event.

"There are 50,000 jobs that will be available within the next 15 years in this industry, and nobody realises how exciting agriculture is.

"We cannot lose track of the traditional crafts.

Who is going to do stonewalling? Who is going to thatch your cottage? However, there are also a lot of modern day skills needed out there – things like scientific research, engineering, marketing and information technology.

"Farming is not the vision of somebody in filthy wellies and a boiler suit any more. It is high technology and big business these days."

Isobel Bretherton – National Farming Union representative for the South East – added: "It's so important we enthuse young people about food and farming, and that they understand where their food comes from, as well as recognising there are good career paths and that you can earn a good living with agriculture. I applaud the organisers of this event."

Creative minds gather at UCA event to discuss future role of universities

INFLUENTIAL figures from the worlds of business, education and politics discussed the role of the creative industries at an event organised by the University for the Creative Arts.

International business adviser David Parrish and former Chatham and Aylesford MP Jonathan Shaw joined a panel of experts at the Creative Industries Leadership Forum in London, last month.

In partnership with the Work Foundation, the event provided a platform for a debate into how the education sector can assist the UK's creative industries to compete in the global market.

Organiser Dr Martin Bouette, who runs UCA Rochester's MBA in creative industries management, said: "The timing of this debate into creativity, business and education is fantastic because we have an opportunity to influence the role the creative industries can play in kick-starting our stalling economy."

"It was a well-attended, lively debate and we were proud to have such a great panel of experts and attendees."

Mr Shaw, the former Labour minister for the South East, added: "The debate really got underneath some of the key issues facing universities and how they can help talented people develop business skills as well as creative skills."

The next debate, on entrepreneurship and education, takes place on November 25.

Tuition fees explained at BIS roadshow

GRADUATES are touring schools and colleges across Kent to help young people understand the changes to higher education student finance.

From next year universities will be allowed to charge tuition fees of up to £9,000, but students will not have to pay any of the cost back until they are earning more than £21,000 per year.

Pupils at St Augustine Academy, Maidstone, were some of the first to be given a presentation explaining the new system, as part of the Government's Student Finance School and College Tour.

Recent graduates and representatives of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) aim to visit 120 schools and colleges in Kent in the run-up to the UCAS application deadline on January 15.

Ajay Attra, teacher and director of business enterprise at St Augustine Academy, said: "Our students are facing an important life decision and it is understandable that they and their parents might have concerns."

"Many of our students are confused about whether or not to go to university."

"There has been a lot of misinformation about student finance, so it's important students get the facts about university costs and the help that is available."

"Today's presentation did that. As a recent graduate, our guest Tom Farrell was able to give the students a better understanding of what university is really like as well as useful peer-to-peer advice."

EXPERIENCED: Recent graduate Tom Farrell

"I'm sure this approach made it much easier for students to open up and get the most out of the Q&A sessions."

Universities minister David Willetts said: "Recent graduates are ideally placed to give prospective students the facts about going to university. Having just graduated, they can not only explain the student finance system, but they can also give that all-important insight into what university life is all about."

"We want to make sure no-one is put off applying to university because they do not have enough information about the new student finance system."

Sydney Opera House accolade for music lecturer who is a hit in Oz

SYDNEY Opera House will play host to a short work by Canterbury Christ Church University's senior lecturer for music.

'Breakdown' by Dr Matt Wright will be performed by Ensemble Offspring, a contemporary music collective who are rapidly gaining a glowing reputation across Australia.

His piece will kick off a wider event called The New Radicals, featuring composers from Norway, Denmark, New Zealand and Holland.

Dr Wright said: "I'm thrilled my work is starting to get performed in Australia, and naturally completely shocked it's being played at the Sydney Opera House."

"It's thanks to the staff and students of the music and performing arts department at Canterbury Christ Church that I've had the chance to make things like this happen, and I'm really inspired by the possibilities for the future."

In November next year, Ensemble Offspring will also tour Totem for Sydney – a new commissioned work from Dr Wright which focuses on fresh approaches to the concert hall tradition.

The lecturer's other compositional work will also be featured in the UK, France, Holland and Belgium this year, and follows the recent worldwide release of a CD he co-composed and recorded with acclaimed saxophonist Evan Parker in Broadstairs and Canterbury.

NOTICE OF CONFIRMATION OF MODIFICATION ORDER WILDLIFE AND COUNTRYSIDE ACT 1981

DEFINITIVE MAP AND STATEMENT FOR THE COUNTY OF KENT

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL

(PUBLIC FOOTPATH SR736, RIVERHEAD) DEFINITIVE MAP MODIFICATION ORDER 2011

On 6 October 2011 the Kent County Council confirmed the above Order.

The effect of the Order as confirmed is to modify the Definitive Map and Statement for the area by adding Public Footpath SR736 which commences on Maidstone Road. At this point there is a set of staggered barriers. The path runs in a southerly direction for 39.5 metres (between the Points A-B-C-D), then south south-easterly thence east north-easterly for 32.5 metres (between the Points D-E-F). Between the Points E-F there is a connection to Church Field. The path then continues to run in a south south-easterly direction for 20.5 metres (between the Points F-G-H). The path continues in a south south-easterly direction, thence west south-westerly direction for 11.0 metres to its connection with St Mary's Church Yard (between the Points H-J). Please see Part II of the Order Schedule for the Schedule of widths.

All distances are approximate, all directions are general.

A copy of the Order as confirmed and Map may be seen free of charge during normal office hours at the offices of Sevenoaks District Council, PO Box 183, Argyle Road, Sevenoaks, Kent, TN13 1HG or at the Kent County Council, Countryside Access Service, Invicta House, County Hall, Maidstone, Kent ME14 1XX. Copies of the Order and Map may also be purchased there.

This Order came into force on 6 October 2011, but if a person aggrieved by the Order desires to question the validity thereof or of any provision contained therein on the grounds that it is not within the powers of Section 53(3)(c)(i) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, or that any of the requirements of Schedule 15 to the Act have not been complied with in relation to the confirmation of the Order, he or she may, under Paragraph 12 of Schedule 15 to the Act, within 42 days from 23 October 2011 make an application for the purpose to the High Court.

THE INTERVIEW

Gerry Marsden

Still walking on after all these years

His love of performing remains undiminished, but as Gerry Marsden, founder of legendary 60s stars Gerry and the Pacemakers reveals to Joe Bill, his band could have had a very different name...

WITH three number ones, 50 years' experience and a widely-known song under his belt, you could forgive Gerry Marsden if he decided to hang up the guitar and take a well-earned break.

But the frontman for 60s stars Gerry and The Pacemakers couldn't have retirement further from his mind.

He said: "I still love it. I have been touring for so long, it's my life. I get a great deal of joy out of it. Obviously my main joy is my family, but my second is touring.

"We are still touring seven months of the year and have just done Australia, New Zealand, Manila and are now back in the UK from September to November."

The 69-year-old still has the buzz for the live show and is delighted the band's songs have stood the test of time for modern audiences.

The Liverpoolian said: "The strange thing is we get people of 93 coming to the gigs, as well as youngsters of 16 who have been brought up with the music. Their grandmas played it to their children and then they have done the same.

"They come to me after the show and I always ask them if they have been dragged here by their parents. They say 'No, Gerry, we love the music, so we wanted to see the people who recorded it'. It's a nice buzz to still get the young people."

Marsden and his band were the first to bag three number ones from their first three singles, which included How Do You Do It? and I Like It.

The group were managed at the time by Beatles supremo Brian Epstein, and consequently had a friendly rivalry with the Fab Four. But Gerry had known one member long before the music scene.

He said: "The funny thing was that we knew the boys from years before, when we both had skiffle bands. They were called The Quarrymen and we had the Gerry Marsden Skiffle Group, so we were mates.

"But John Lennon was my best pal – we grew up together. When I think back now, we never, ever could have anticipated what happened.

"That they would become massive across the world, or us going off and conquering America – you could never conceive that idea. But to make a record and get the first three number ones in a row, we thought 'Bloody hell, what's going on?'.

"It was great and we toured together and we would chat and have a bit of a laugh. I miss John a great deal. But we still have a giggle whenever Paul meets up and we have a bit of a remembrance day. They were really good days."

Rather amusing is the story of how the Pacemakers got their name.

Originally, Marsden and the band were going to be called Gerry Marsden and the Mars Bars, but the chocolate company put a stop to it.

He said: "My father wrote to them, and they said no. So when we got our first number one, my father wrote to them again and said 'Do you remember that band? Well, they're number one in the charts now'.

"The publicity bloke wrote back and told us we could use the name all of a sudden. But never mind."

The Pacemakers name came after Marsden watched an athletics race on television and heard the term

MARSDEN, ON LINKS WITH THE BEATLES

mentioned: "I told the boys and they liked it – it was as simple as that."

But one of the best-known reasons the band have stood the test of time is their 1963 hit You'll Never Walk Alone.

The song has become synonymous with the city of Liverpool and especially Liverpool Football Club, Marsden's beloved hometown team.

He said: "It is a song from the famous musical Carousel. It is when the guy dies and his wife is very upset. The song is saying 'yes he has gone to Heaven but you need to carry on and be strong'.

"The lyrics are beautiful. They are what made me record the song. I told the band and at the time we were playing rhythm and blues and rock and roll, so they said 'What?!'.

"I said it was a great ballad and we put an off-beat on it and some drums and the rest is history."

It soon got picked up by Liverpool FC supporters, who would chant it on the terraces of their home ground.

He said: "What they used to do at Anfield before kick-off was play the top 10 from the charts that week.

"When Walk Alone was number one, which it was for a few weeks, it played just before the kick-off. When it finished, they started the match, so then when the song dropped out of the top 10 they obviously didn't play it any more. But the fans were shouting 'Where's our song, where's our song?'. So the club had to put it back on again. From there it just got put on at every match just before kick-off.

"I was at the game where they did it for the first time – it was unbelievable. It still gives me a real buzz now when I go to see my team."

Gerry and The Pacemakers went on to release another hit synonymous with the North West, Ferry Across The Mersey.

And Marsden has vowed to keep touring as long as the fans come – and his wife goes with him.

He said: "She comes around the world with me. To Canada, America and Hawaii, but for some reason she doesn't come along when we play in Grimsby. I will let her off, though... she has been around England with me a fair few times already."

■ Gerry and the latest incarnation of The Pacemakers are joined by The Searchers and the Sixties Gold Tour, which comes to Tunbridge Wells's Assembly Hall Theatre on Saturday, October 29. Their tour also heads to Chatham's Central Theatre on Wednesday, November 2, and Margate Winter Gardens on Thursday, November 3.

DURING the past few years, for many the jewel in Whitstable's restaurant crown has not, as you might perhaps have expected, sat perched in a beachside location, or in the very heart of its bustling town centre. Instead, a five-minute stroll down the main street towards Canterbury brought you to Salt Marsh.

It was small, it was a bit cramped, it overlooked an accountants, but it had charisma and atmosphere by the bucket load.

What's more, it was unique. There was no menu and no price list. You entered blind and rather gave yourself over to the experience.

And it delivered. The food was fresh, seasonal and full of flavour.

Trying to book a table was always something that needed some serious pre-planning (a sure sign it was on to something good) and the hustle and bustle of close tables made it an often noisy but thoroughly enjoyable place to eat and drink. It was the locals' best-kept secret.

What's more, the fear over the final bill was dispelled when it turned up and was more than reasonable.

But last month it shut up shop... its owners instead taking over the tenancy of perhaps the town's most high-profile pub, The Duke of Cumberland and its commanding central position.

Salt Marsh, however, has gone with it – the pub's former brasserie now reinvented.

It's akin to a hotly-acclaimed young independent movie-director being signed up by a major Hollywood studio.

The question is, will the ability to do things on a bigger scale, reach a wider, mainstream audience and cash in on a huge promotional

This gem still shines but loses a little sparkle in bigger venue

RESTAURANT REVIEW

push allow the place to keep the innate charm that made it so respected in the first place?

The answer is a cautious yes.

Salt Marsh remains something different.

The restaurant is bigger, beautifully lit, with wooden floors, chunky tables and background music leaning towards the latino. You can also now sit without the person behind you constantly bashing into you when they pull out their chair.

The big glass doors open to provide an outside seating area – sprawling out to meet the outside courtyard of the pub, of which it sits almost as a separate entity with its own entrance.

The menu is still relayed via the staff – all of whom were friendly and efficient – and if you don't ask, then there will be no talk of money until you ask for the bill.

What's more, the food concept remains the same. The menu is tight: starters include old favourites like king prawns, mushrooms on toast, and meat or tuna balls; the main course pork chops, lamb, ribeye steak, eel or sea bream. If you don't eat meat or fish, you will struggle.

But for those who do, you will be rewarded.

The food, for the most part, remains delicious. Our mushrooms exuded a rich taste and flavour and the prawns looked like they were Olympic swimmers, such were their size and texture. The tuna balls, in truth, were rather tasteless despite the chilli sauce.

Ordering a selection to share is worthwhile – but the portions are big... although not as substantial as the main courses, which defy you to tackle them.

The pork chop was enormous, and the side dishes – sautéed potatoes, Mediterranean vegetables and butternut squash – enough to feed the most ravenous diner.

But when your only real complaint is the fact that the main meals look a little daunting, well, it feels rather mean.

With three starters, two main meals and a bottle of wine weighing in at £55 and your waistline all the bigger as a result, it's hard to find fault. (For those who find the lack of prices unsettling, the starters range from £5-£7, the main meals around the £12-£14 mark, ditto the wine). Chocolate brownies and home-made carrot cake await those brave enough to tackle dessert.

There was, however, a definite change in the atmosphere. It has lost a little of its sparkle, be that through a change in the clientele or simply that it's bigger and less intense.

Although it had set such a high bar, it was perhaps always going to struggle to replicate it on the more high-profile stage. It's still a box-office smash, but you cannot help but yearn for the nuts-and-bolts simplicity of its former incarnation.

But then you can't stand in the way of progress, and Whitstable's town-centre hub has a very significant new kid in its midst.

Variety holds the key to our gourmet glee

NEW foods, flavours and cooking techniques are just some of the benefits of our British multicultural society. With new nationalities come new dishes and, inevitably, new restaurants.

A quick glance at the rolling hills of the North Downs, or the streets of the county's historic towns or quaint seaside resorts, and you could be forgiven for thinking that the only meal you could get is either a very British roast dinner or traditional fish and chips. You would be wrong.

Long gone are the days when an exotic meal out consisted of two choices... Chinese or Indian.

Kent is now blessed with a diverse range of foreign foods, including Mexican, Nepalese, Thai, Italian, French, Greek or even Russian restaurants.

Never before have so many nationalities had the traditional foods of their heritage available to us all, whenever we want them.

And that means that never before have there been so many options from which diners can choose.

The best thing for chefs in all of Kent's restaurants, no matter what nationality, is the range of local produce that can be harvested and used for so many wonderful dishes.

From the classically-British fisherman's pie to the exotic and spicy king-prawn Madras, from the gravy-covered roast beef to the chilli chicken fajita, Kent has both the ingredients and the know-how for all.

But just in case you are worried by the range of choices available or you just can't choose which continent to try out, here are six crackers.

Christies Birchington

Why here...

Friendly service and close to the train station, Christies Wine Bar offers home-cooked food seven days a week. There is also a free function room for hire and booking now for Christmas.

On the menu...

Curry night is on Wednesdays from 6pm-8pm with live music, curry and a drink for £7.95. Mexican Night is every Thursday from 6pm-9pm; two courses just £9.95, Sol lager just £1.50 per bottle.

How to book...

Christies Wine Bar, 1-3 Station Approach, Birchington CT7 9RD phone: 01843 847847 christieswinebar.webs.com

Chiquito Westwood Cross

Why here...

Chiquito has a lively atmosphere with fantastic set menus throughout the week. There are classic Mexican options for a quick lunch from £5.99, or two courses from the evening menu at £9.99.

On the menu...

Nachos are perfect for sharing, as well as the margaritas, complementing the authentic Mexican favourites prepared to your taste, whether it be mild or spicy. Plus the sizzling fajitas are a favourite.

How to book...

Chiquito, Westwood Cross, Broadstairs phone: 01843 579320 www.chiquito.co.uk

Waterfront Dover Marina

Why here...

The Waterfront restaurant at the Best Western Dover Marina Hotel overlooks the waterfront and is open seven days a week for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

The à la carte menu offers diners a range of international dishes specially selected by the head chef.

In addition to the à la carte menu, there is a table d'hôte menu available for both lunch and dinner and a special two-course pensioner's lunch menu at £9.95 on Thursdays.

On the menu...

The à la carte menu features a range of appetisers, main courses and desserts that include local produce wherever possible. Sunday lunchtimes are especially popular, with the delicious Sunday carvery from £15.95 per person for two courses.

How to book...

The Waterfront Restaurant, Best Western Dover Marina Hotel and Spa, Waterloo Crescent, Dover; phone: 01304 203633; email: reservations@dovermarinahotel.co.uk

William & Brown Whitstable

Why here...

Serves modern and traditional Spanish dishes, using the best suppliers and importers. Menus change to coincide with seasonal produce. It has a great spot in picturesque Whitstable.

On the menu...

Jamon Iberico, guindillas with anchovies, scallops with morcilla, sardinas a la plancha, Catalan honeyed chicken, beef Madrid, paella Valenciana and albóndigas with calamares are just some of the traditional dishes.

How to book...

William & Brown Tapas, 48 Harbour Street, Whitstable phone: 01227 273373

The Olive Tree Ramada Dover

Why here...

Open seven days a week, The Olive Tree restaurant offers a range of international dishes from the à la carte menu. There are also two international themed nights: Thursday is Italian Night, with an extensive buffet of Italian dishes, while Friday is Spice Night, catering for connoisseurs of Indian food. Both nights feature 'live cooking' with a pianist playing background music.

On the menu...

Italian Night and Spice Night offers an Eat All You Can buffet with an extensive range of authentic local food. The buffet features a range of appetisers, main courses and desserts to choose from, all carefully prepared by internationally-trained chefs.

HALLOWEEN AND BONFIRE NIGHT

KENT AND EAST SUSSEX RAILWAY

Train rides promise to be frighteningly good fun

TAKE a spooky steam-train ride on the Halloween and Fright Night special trains at the Kent & East Sussex Railway in Tenterden.

There will be plenty of spine-tingling tricks and treats during Halloween fun week from Monday to Friday, October 24-28.

Enjoy spooktacular entertainment at Tenterden station and join in the 'make and take' activities, including the pumpkin-carving workshop. All activities are included in the ticket price. Fares are £37 for a family, £13.50 for adults, £12.50 for seniors, and £8.50 for children.

As the clock strikes 6pm on Friday, October 28, and Saturday, October 29, take a ride from Tenterden to Bodiam on the popular Fright Night Train.

Enjoy scary face-painting, activities and pumpkin-carving at Tenterden station from 4.30pm.

Be prepared to be frightened silly with ghostly goings-on at stations, a fireworks display and surprises, too. Every child will receive a delicious snack box for the all-inclusive price of £14.50. Booking is essential.

Families are encouraged to come in fancy-dress, the scarier the better. The restaurant will remain open until 6pm and visitors can choose from delicious light meals and snacks. For more information, visit the Kent & East Sussex Railway at www.kesr.org.uk or phone 01580 765155.

KENT LIFE

The safe place to trick or treat

LITTLE horrors will feel right at home among the family-friendly frights on offer at heritage farm centre Kent Life.

Events running this half-term week, Saturday, October 22, to Sunday, October 30, include safe trick-or-treating and a creepy-crawly cuddle corner.

Kent Life, in Sandling, near Maidstone, has everything any child would want for a memorable spooky experience – not least, ghostly residents who might play a gruesome trick on anyone brave enough to knock on their door.

A special after-school trick-or-treating session will also be held on Monday, October 31, from 2pm until 5pm, with a best-dressed Halloween costume competition at 4pm.

Visitors will come face to face with their fears as they get up close and personal with creatures that normally send shivers down the spine, such as tarantulas, hissing cockroaches, corn snakes and even a royal python.

Other activities include ghostly story-telling and spooky face-painting. There will also be a petrifying paint-a-pot studio to create gruesome works of art.

To add to the atmosphere, visitors are encouraged to come in Halloween fancy-dress and there will be daily best-dressed competitions.

Events manager Kirsty Vernon said: "Spooktacular fun is a great event held here at Kent Life and there is always a special, spooky vibe in the air. We are the only attraction to offer a safe environment for children to trick or treat in and there are so many different things around our site to keep both children and adults occupied all day long.

"This makes Kent Life a fantastic choice for a family outing this Halloween."

No pre-booking is required for this fun family event.

Kent Life will also be hosting a fireworks and bonfire extravaganza on Saturday, November 5, from 4.30pm until 9pm.

The display will be set to music by Scenic, known for award-winning displays such as the fireworks at the London Eye on New Year's Eve.

FARRIERS ARMS

Bring your own Guy along to celebration

HALLOWEEN, Guy Fawkes and fireworks are all being celebrated at The Farriers Arms, Mersham.

This beautifully-restored country pub was built in 1606 – the same year that the historical Guy Fawkes was executed after his failed attempt to blow up the Houses of Parliament.

Guests should bring along their own Guy on Saturday, November 5, for a chance to win £100 for a nominated local, non-profit-making organisation. There are three £100 prizes in all in child, youth and adult categories.

Alternatively, visitors can drink a pint of the pub brewery's own 1606 real ale at the Halloween buffet evening on Monday, October 31.

Ghost walks Story of the headless boy

Historic Dockyard, Chatham
Until Friday, December 16
www.thedockyard.co.uk
01634 823815

AS the winter darkness draws in, The Historic Dockyard takes on an eerie atmosphere, providing the perfect backdrop for stories of history, intrigue, murder and mystery.

Visitors can join the ghost walks around the site, taking in the creepy shadows of the Commissioner's House Garden and the Victorian Ropery. They will hear tales of strange figures seen in area, the legend of the headless drummer boy and that of the real dockyard murder. The walks will take place on Friday evenings and are priced at £10 per person. The evening starts at 7.30pm and lasts 90 minutes. All walks must be pre-booked and pre-paid by emailing ghostwalks@chdt.org.uk.

Fun guys and gals sought Fungus foray

Ranscombe Farm, Cuxton
Tuesday, October 25
01634 292062
www.plantlife.org.uk/ranscombe

A FREE, family-friendly fungus walk will take place in half-term week through superb woodland near Rochester. Wildlife fans will be meeting at Ranscombe Farm Reserve for a fungus foray as part of a series of events planned by local naturalist Fred Booth and supported by the Heritage Lottery Fund and Medway Council.

Explore ancient Cobham Great Wood and discover why toadstools are terrific and inkcaps are incredible. Fungi are the secret ingredients that make woods work. They break down dead leaves and wood, returning nutrients to the soil, and even form special partnerships with trees in which the fungus provides the tree with important minerals. The walk is from 10am-12pm and places should be booked.

Game for a laugh? Pumpkin Day

Godinton House, Ashford
Sunday, October 30, from 11am-4pm 01233 643854
www.godinton-house-gardens.co.uk

THERE will be spooky goings-on at Godinton House and Gardens for Halloween next week. Pumpkin Day will see a variety of family activities including the traditional carving of pumpkin lanterns, children's craft activities, a seasonal treasure hunt around the grounds of Godinton and the ever-popular scary stories in the cellars. A Harris hawk and a rare Chaco owl will be on display.

If you want to make a pumpkin pie or roast the seeds, then choose from the selection of pumpkins and gourds that will be for sale. Godmersham Game will return with its local produce, selling venison burgers and sausages. Tickets cost £5 for adults and £2 for children.

New arrival Mother nilgai true to form

Howletts, Bekesbourne
Open 10am-5pm in winter
01227 721286
www.aspinallfoundation.org

KEEPERS at Howletts Wild Animal Park near Canterbury were delighted to announce the birth of a baby nilgai. Nilgai are part of the antelope family and are found wild mainly in India. Their natural habitat consists of dry scrub and open woodland. Animal director Neil Spooner said: "Mother and calf seem to be doing very well indeed and, although they are at some risk in the wild, Howletts has a very good record of breeding them." Visitors to Howletts can watch the young nilgai grow and develop over the next few months when they take advantage of the passport offer by which, for the standard entry price, they can return as often as they wish for free over the next 12 months.

Drama from the classroom Teachers

Memorial Theatre, Broadstairs

Sunday, October 30, 8pm
0845 2626263

THE Platform Theatre Company returns to the Sarah Thorne Theatre Club for a production of John Godber's classroom comedy, Teachers. The show details life at a modern comprehensive school and, using the format of an end-of-term play, invites audiences to watch a drama teacher's progress through two terms of reluctant classes, cynical colleagues and obstructive caretakers. Watch as the main character then departs for the safer waters of a private school. Teachers is a humorous and heart-warming play and has been described as a modern classic.

Tickets are £8 for adults and £6 for youths (Sarah Thorne Theatre Club members) and £10 for adults and £8 for youths (non-members). Seats are bookable in advance.

Classic ballet Is Coppelia a doll with soul?

Theatre Royal Margate

Sunday, October 23, 7.30pm
01227 787787
Adults £19, children £10

ONE of the most popular touring ballet companies heads to Margate this month with its production of world favourite Coppelia. European Ballet can boast both international dancers and top director Stanislav Tchassov and has built a reputation for superb live classical performances.

The ballet tells the story of a romance between Swanhilda and Franz as well as that of doll-maker Coppelius, whose greatest desire is to build a doll with a soul, Coppelia.

Franz falls in love with the doll, which he thinks is alive, and the story unfolds. The production will see dancers from Russia, France, Italy, Switzerland and the UK take on the humorous ballet.

Nasty Nick in panto Baddy and a beanstalk

Granville Theatre, Ramsgate

Friday, December 9, to Monday, January 2 www.granvilletheatre.com
01843 591750

INFAMOUS Big Brother favourite 'Nasty' Nick Bateman stars in this year's Granville Theatre Christmas panto, Jack And The Beanstalk. The production also features the popular Frank Tucker as Dame Trott, while Kent's Nasty Nick continues his bad-boy role as Baron Fleshcreep. Following the success of Cinderella in 2009 and Aladdin last year, director James Darnley leads another cast in what should be a magical Christmas schedule.

The story involves the hapless Jack, his beloved cow Daisy, a handful of magic beans, a larger-than-life beanstalk and a very mean giant at the top of it. Child tickets are from £10; adult tickets are from £11; and family tickets are available.

Family frolics Simple Simon to the rescue

Winter Gardens, Margate

Wednesday, October 26, 2pm

www.margatewintergardens.co.uk

IT is half-term and time for the latest adventure for families with Simple Simon. This year, Fairy Stardust needs Simon and his pet cat Tommy to help Sleeping Beauty in a brand-new exciting adventure. We arrive in Storybookland to find Beauty, happily married to her prince, and having just had a beautiful baby girl. They don't know that the evil Fairy Carabosse plans to return to kidnap the baby and in doing so force Beauty to go back to the spinning wheel, as she planned in the original story. Will Simon be able to save the day? The show is full of song and comedy, and lucky children are selected at random to get up on the stage to take part. Tickets are £6.

Maidstone property report

PROPERTY SPOTLIGHT ON MAIDSTONE

What makes it special

THE county town has seen recent development, especially along the River Medway waterfront, where a number of luxury apartment blocks have been constructed. Locally there are excellent shopping opportunities, bars, cafés and restaurants and close by are a number of picturesque villages. Developments reflect the town's popularity as a desirable location.

Room to improve

SOME of the outlying parts of the town are in need of regeneration, with roads getting extremely congested, especially at weekends, when this can lead to parking problems. Some of the nearby villages along the river have experienced severe flooding, but improvements in defences have largely eradicated this threat. However, it has made insurance an issue for homeowners.

Prices

FLATS can be obtained for an average of about £126,000, but riverside apartments can be almost twice that figure. Terraced homes are about £170,000, with semi-detached houses £220,000. A detached home can be about £370,000, but this can increase, especially in some of the villages. Rents can vary according to location, with bargains of about £80 per week in some areas.

Connections

MAIDSTONE has easy access to the M2 and M20. Heathrow and Gatwick are also easily accessible with a rail link to Gatwick, via Tonbridge. High-speed trains stop in the town, making journey times to London St Pancras about 47 minutes or 20 minutes to Ashford International.

New ventures bring life to county town

MAIDSTONE is a focus for Kent's local government and administration. But it is much more than that.

The River Medway runs through the heart of the town and this area has seen some of the most prestigious new developments in recent years anywhere in the county.

Along the riverbanks have sprung up a number of top-of-the-range apartments and flats – some carefully crafted to reflect the importance of the river in the town's development, with boat stylings and shapes incorporated into the architecture.

These homes have seen an influx of well-to-do professional people, many of them young, which has led to new restaurants and bars opening their doors, making the town a more desirable place to live. New shops have also opened and the town is a thriving commercial hub.

The introduction of a high-speed train service to London St Pancras has also been a factor in making Maidstone a fixture on the property map as the rail network now complements the easy access to the country's motorway network via the M20 and M2.

Historically, the rail link, which originally did not stop in Maidstone, was a mixed blessing to the town as it brought cases of property blight. Initially it was feared the noise would have an effect on homes, especially those in attractive locations such as Harrietsham and Hollingbourne. This led to some being put on the market at bargain prices by owners seeking to relocate to less noisy locations.

However, the problem was arguably less than expected, which led to some newcomers picking up great deals.

Another aspect, this time natural, which has affected prices in the immediate is the threat of flooding.

During heavy rainfall about a decade ago, the levels of the River Medway rose substantially, and while the town was not affected, several villages were. Some homes in Yalding and its surroundings received severe damage and householders were forced to use sandbags to protect their properties. The issue of insurance remained for several years, with premiums reflecting the risk – however, flood defences have been improved in recent years.

The area has a range of both primary and secondary schools and results at Invicta Grammar School in particular have been excellent in recent years. The Hazlitt Theatre offers regular productions and there is a thriving multi-cultural show annually.

In recent years, Madonna played a show in Mote Park, which is a popular spot for relaxation and has its own sports centre.

Nearby Leeds Castle is one of the most beautiful buildings in the world and just outside the town is a much-visited set of prehistoric standing stones – very unusual for Kent.

Italian marque has come up trumps with this stylish little number

SEE ROAD TEST

THE NEW RODEO HAS A TIMING CHAIN, NOT A TIMING BELT.

BECAUSE A TOUGH WORKING WORLD NEEDS A TOUGH WORKING PICK-UP.

At Isuzu we only make commercial vehicles. That's why we can focus on making the Rodeo powerful, tough and built to go the distance. Created from our commercial vehicle DNA, every part is dedicated to work. And dedicated to working harder. That's why we use a strong stainless steel timing chain as found on trucks, rather than the weaker rubber belt found on most other pick-ups. With the Rodeo there are no compromises. So when you need something built for the job, turn to the experts. Because the Isuzu Rodeo is 100% pick-up, from bumper to bumper.

New A6 Avant.

Ultra lightweight technology, with ultra competitive business offers from £399 plus VAT per month*.

A car that weighs less, drinks less. The new A6 Avant is engineered with Audi ultra lightweight technology. Part aluminium, it's up to 70kg lighter than its predecessor. So it's more fuel-efficient (up to 56.5mpg combined), emits less CO<sub>2</sub> and even costs less to tax. With ultra competitive business offers, you might find the cost of owning the A6 Avant is less than you'd expect too.

MiTo full with Alfa's DNA

By Sam Davison
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

NOT since the legendary Alfasud of the 1970s has Alfa Romeo sold such a popular small car as the current MiTo.

Even better, since launch in 2008 it has also allayed fears it will self-destruct like that corrosion- and unreliability-prone predecessor.

But it is the car's styling and the typical deep V-shape Alfa grille that seduces buyers and, unlike most rivals, it doesn't need costly add-ons to catch the eye – you can get the three-door Alfa supermini-cum-coupé look from just £12,250.

Of course, you can go mad if you wish and get the 170bhp (0-62mph in 7.4 seconds) Cloverleaf or Quadrifoglio for a not unreasonable £18,755, but our road test sought the best bangs for your bucks.

We settled on a mid-spec Sprint model (from £12,950) with the powerful yet eco-friendly 105bhp 1.4-litre MultiAir petrol engine and six-speed gearbox.

This comes with a stop-start package that curbs consumption and emissions in busy traffic yet still offers decent power (0-62mph in 11.2 seconds) and lots of driving fun from one of the most driver-pleasing small-car chassis around.

Apart from this Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde combination available to you, this car also comes with the DNA driving package that is standard on the MiTo and also fitted to the bigger but no less impressive Giulietta.

The abbreviation stands for Dynamic, Normal and All-Weather and each makes different adjustments to the power delivery, brakes, steering, suspension and gearbox.

Dynamic is the sport mode, with steering and throttle weighting up and chassis delivering maximum tautness on the road, neatly avoiding my usual beef about hot hatchbacks having to put up with rock-hard

EYE CANDY: Alfa Romeo's MiTo not only looks the part but boasts some impressive technology inside, the kind you would find on more premium motors suspension all the time when you may need it only 10 per cent of the time; with Dynamic, you rattle your kidneys only when you want to.

Normal does what it says on the tin and manages economy via the start-stop and an arrow indicator on the dashboard telling you when best to change up or down.

All-Weather will get you home when conditions turn greasy or icy by toning down ill-judged steering or throttle movements and giving best grip. I have proved on previous MiTo drives that it works and, again, allays any fears that DNA is just a lot of marketing fluff.

Indeed, it is the kind of package you would expect to find on a bigger, more premium car and highlights how much kit comes as standard on MiTo models.

There is impressive tech inside, too, with the Fiat-derived Blue & Me comms and audio package that automatically synchs your phone and allows easy hook up to an iPod or MP3-player.

As you might expect, the dashboard is sporty.

What you might not expect is that the fit, finish and arrangement are far superior to Alfa Romeos of old, although installing the 12v and audio Aux/USB sockets ahead of the handbrake means that you need to beware of entangling yourself in plugs and leads.

The predominantly black cabin also means that the rear seats are a bit gloomy, especially for children, who might struggle – even with booster seats – to see much.

But this is not a car you buy so much for practicality. Like its most obvious rival, the BMW Mini, it is a car you buy for image and individuality, despite a name that looks like Me Too.

MiTo is actually an abbreviation of Milano and Torino and neatly sums up the car; Milano is Italy's style capital and Alfa's home town – the city's red cross features in the brand's famous badge – while Torino is Italy's motor city and it's where this little Italian charmer is built.

MOTORING NEWS

Generation VI BMW due soon

BMW has announced prices (from £21,400) for the sixth-generation 3-Series.

It will launch in February with four engine choices, include an eight-speed auto gearbox option and, eventually, offer all-wheel drive and hybrid versions. BMW says it will expand its already big appeal to business users through extra fuel-saving technologies.

Miserly magic from Octavia

SKODA'S Octavia GreenLine II eco star eked out the Best Family Car award in Fleet World magazine's annual MPG Marathon.

The Skoda returned 85.98mpg on a 370-mile two-day course, beating its official combined cycle fuel economy of 74.3mpg by 15.7 per cent. It was beaten into third place overall by a Suzuki Swift supermini – a Smart was first.

Veloster to be a coupé star

AMBITIOUS Hyundai launches an innovative coupé in February.

With rear-seat access via a single door on the pavement side, the Veloster (from £17,995) should be as practical as it is eye-catching. And lively, with a 138bhp 1.6-litre four-cylinder petrol engine, plus six-speed manual or Hyundai's first dual-clutch auto gearbox, and averaging almost 50mpg.

Avant no7 takes Audi A6 further forward

1ST DRIVE

By Sam Davison

editorial@archant.co.uk

IT says much for Audi's design and engineering strength that despite a six- to seven-year production life, some of its cars seem to be axed long before their time is up.

Indeed, the previous A4 was recently repackaged as the Exeo range, for Spanish sister brand Seat.

Maybe the previous A6 faces a similar rebirth? It certainly didn't seem ready to be dropped, and yet the UK's premium-car sector leader has done just that and taken its mid-range star even higher.

And the newly-launched A6 estate version – or Avant, to use Audi-speak – is now almost as important as the saloon, being set to account for some 43 per cent of UK sales, costing £1,840 more than the booted version and starting at £32,100.

This the seventh generation in this style, if you include the Audi 100 Avant series that preceded the A6 badge in 1994, and is arguably the most handsome executive estate on the market. It has an even more upmarket cabin than before, more headroom and shoulder room and has gone backwards in only one interior dimension – a paltry 1mm reduction in luggage compartment width.

Admittedly, it is longer than its obvious rivals – the BMW 5-Series Touring and Mercedes-Benz Estate – and actually has less maximum load capacity than the Merc, but it is markedly lighter thanks to some 20 per cent aluminium in the bodywork.

Even at launch it offers an impressive choice of eco-friendly engines, with 16 per cent better CO2 emissions overall against the old car and up to 16 per cent better average fuel consumption.

The latter figure applies to the front-wheel drive 2.0TDI diesel expected to sweep up 75 per cent of sales to business users – who, coincidentally, also account for 75 per cent of all A6 sales – but all versions I have driven offer big advantages against previous equivalents.

Two trim options are offered currently: SE includes 17-inch alloys, cruise control, twin-zone climate control, the Audi drive select – allowing the driver to customise how he/she wants the car and powertrain to behave – sat-nav, parking sensors, leather seats and Bluetooth connectivity, but just £2,350 more buys the prestigious S-Line package with 18-inch alloys, sports suspension, electric seats, headlight washers and fancy cosmetics.

What all this tells you in short is that most reasonable options are standard. There is also the option to add Audi's Quattro all-wheel-drive system, attracting a third of all UK A6 buyers.

On the road, all models impress; I enjoyed the nimbleness and willingness of the turbocharged 3.0 petrol model, but today's real-world motoring means it will attract just 2 per cent of sales.

Most buyers want the low-down power-plus economy of the impressive diesels, even if they deaden the A6's on-road élan slightly.

The junior diesel model deserves to be the best-seller by far, delivering what most buyers need, but the 3.0-litre diesel versions offer more sportiness for little more fuel consumption thanks to that light and aerodynamic body.

The car's slipperiness undoubtedly adds to its luxury-car refinement and there is very little road noise, either.

Full marks are also due for retention of the old car's superb grip and handling while improving ride quality and comfort, which allows relaxed motorway cruising and adventurous driving on challenging roads.

As the Avant name suggests, this sporting estate is another major step forward for the German brand.

Motability

This life-changing revolution

MOTABILITY has radically changed the way disabled people and their families can live.

The Government-backed scheme enables them to get on the road for much less than it would cost them to buy or lease a new or nearly-new car privately, and helps them with potentially costly adaptations for controls or wheelchair access.

On top of that, the scheme's regular payments can take care of everyday running costs; from insurance, maintenance and repairs to breakdown assistance – a huge reassurance when the cost of motoring is soaring.

What is more, Motability does not insist the disabled person is the driver; the car is made available for the benefit of that person, and that means up to two other named drivers can be on the car's insurance cover instead of the disabled person.

■ For more about this liberating scheme, see inside this special supplement.

ECO WINNERS

Even with the savings from the Motability scheme, many customers want to slash running costs and here are three eco winners to consider:

- 1) The diesel version of the Suzuki Swift supermini came second in the annual mpg marathon this month with an average of 86mpg.
- 2) The all-new Kia Picanto was voted What Car? magazine's green supermini of the year.
- 3) Hyundai's miserly i20 Blue supermini is exempt from road tax because it emits less than 100g/km of CO<sub>2</sub>

Key points of a Motability contract

■ Who qualifies?: You do if you get the War Pensioners' Mobility Supplement or the higher rate of the mobility component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA). Even if you do not drive yourself, you can apply for a car as a passenger and propose two other people as your drivers. You can also apply for a car on behalf of a child aged three or over who is entitled to the higher-rate mobility component of Disability Living Allowance.

■ Tax disc: Every year, about 10 days before the tax disc expires, a new one is sent for the coming year, along with a copy of the Motability Ontrack bulletin.

■ Service appointments: Whenever a car's service is due (this varies for each car and might be every year or at a certain mileage point), the dealer contacts the customer to arrange for the work.

■ Renewal: About three months before the end of the contract, customers get a renewal pack to remind them to choose a new car and highlight a selection of the best deals around.

■ MOT: The dealer contacts the customer two months before the end of the contract to arrange the car's MOT test; most cars sail through without problems, but Motability pays for the test and any repairs needed due to general wear and tear.

■ Hand back and collection: The dealer arranges for customers to collect their new car at the same place and day as they hand back the old.

■ Lifestyle: Motability's free quarterly magazine for all customers goes out in February, May, August and November.

DID YOU KNOW?

UP TO two nominated drivers can drive a Motability scheme vehicle, but the disabled person qualifying for the scheme does not have to be one of them. Under the terms of the scheme, the car simply has to be used for the benefit of the disabled person, such as a shopping trip or collecting a prescription – they don't even have to be in the car.

A third insured driver can be added for a small additional sum, but the named-driver list can be varied quickly via a phone call.

THE scheme offers some 300 adaptations to make driving, or travelling, easier and more comfortable, and many of the most popular modifications are free when fitted at the start of the lease. For a free copy of Your Guide To Adaptations, visit www.motability.co.uk or phone 0800 093 1000.

A RECENT innovation allows customers who have driven fewer than 15,000 miles by the end of their agreement to now extend the lease.

There is also a £250 Good Condition Bonus, Motability's way of saying 'thank you' to customers for looking after a car.

MOTABILITY has supplied some three million cars over more than 30 years to deliver more independence to the disabled and their families. Unfortunately, some people abuse the system, but Motability does take action on reports where the disabled person gets little or no benefit from the car; over the past year, more than 800 people have been removed from the scheme altogether and a further 500 prevented from joining or renewing.

MOTABILITY surveys some 600 customers twice-yearly to check that their leasing experience matches expectations.

For the past three years the organisation has achieved an overall satisfaction rating of 97 per cent and scooped three wins at the Top 50 Call Centres For Customer Service awards.

TOURING CARS

WITH TIM HARVEY

Touring car legend Tim Harvey has teamed up with Archant KOS Media this season to bring you a weekly column as the class of 2011 do battle up and down the country. Harvey, who was brought up in Sevenoaks and schooled in Tonbridge, more recently raced in the Porsche Carrera Cup for Wrotham team Motorbase Performance. He shares his thoughts, as an ITV commentator, on the British Touring Car Championship, and discusses the series' big issues.

Neal is now an all-time great

“PUT simply, the best man won on the day at the final round of the British Touring Car Championship (BTCC) last weekend.

Matt Neal came to Silverstone with the best attitude and he was the one that most wanted to win. He stuck his car on pole despite having maximum ballast, which showed his intentions.

Honda had the best car for Silverstone, which meant Jason Plato didn't really have much of a chance.

Crucially Matt had the better of his team-mate Gordon Shedden, who looked happy to settle for second place all weekend.

When you look over the season as a whole Matt was the best driver, so deserved to win his third title.

I think he is definitely now in the series' top five of all time. He's been in touring cars for a long while, which helps in terms of results, but he should certainly be seen as one of the greats.

The season ended on a flat note for Motorbase and Mat Jackson. They set out to win the championship and, but for three terrible rounds at Knockhill, Rockingham and finally Silverstone they possibly could have done an awful lot better.

I know people say you make your own luck, but very often in motorsport you can't alter the way the cards fall and misfortune did play a part in their season.

Nonetheless, they did a brilliant job and finished ahead of Team Aon, who had a new car and a lot of money behind them, in the independents' standings.

You can't fault what Motorbase did and it still represented a step forward for Dave Bartrum and his team. They're now rightly considered one of the top powerhouse teams in touring cars and I'm sure they'll be back even stronger next season.

Like everyone involved in motorsport, I was extremely sad to hear of Dan Wheldon's death during an IndyCar race last weekend. Dan was an English driver who had grown up in the junior single-seater series over here and was well-known to many drivers.

Unfortunately, the dangers of motorsport never completely go away.

More often than not we are lucky not to have more injuries, but even so it's always tragic when someone loses their life racing. It's a terrible thing to happen and made more poignant by the fact he leaves behind a family and young children.

He will be missed.

Kent begin discussions with dozen targets as Key reappointed skipper

Pictures: ADY KERRY

By David Pritchard

david.pritchard@archant.co.uk

THE process of building Kent's squad for next summer is well under way, with the county compiling a shortlist of about 12 players who are genuine targets.

It has been an unsettling start to the off-season at the St Lawrence Ground, with key batsmen Martin van Jaarsveld and Joe Denly following director of cricket Paul Farbrace out of the exit door.

The job of steadying the ship began this week with the reappointment of Rob Key as captain. Adverts have also been placed for Farbrace's successor, with candidates given until November 7 to apply.

Despite the vacant post player recruitment has begun in earnest. An initial long list of 60 has been reduced to a more manageable size.

Jamie Clifford, Kent's chief executive, is open minded about the type of player Kent want and after the success of the relatively unheralded David Balcombe on loan from Hampshire this summer is not quick to reject anyone.

"We have whittled it down to about a dozen we are serious

SEARCH:

Jamie Clifford, Kent's chief executive, is open minded about the type of player Kent want and after the success of the relatively unheralded David Balcombe on loan from Hampshire this summer is not quick to reject anyone.

about talking to" he said.

"I wouldn't say we're looking to restructure the squad, we are supplementing the players who are already there. [The targets] are a whole mix of experienced players and some younger ones as well.

"I think you have to be careful of dismissing players you haven't heard much about. David Balcombe is a great example of someone who hadn't had many opportunities but when we gave him a chance he showed what he could do. We have to be careful we don't just go for the established names."

For the moment, the active search does not include overseas players.

Clifford said: "The days of getting someone for the whole season have gone in the main. This year Wahab Riaz and Charl Langeveldt were late decisions so there's an advantage in holding off. It'll be a case of watch this space really."

TOURING CARS

No trophies but Motorbase proud to be in leading pack

Picture: NICK DUNGAN

UNLUCKY: Airwaves Racing

DESPITE ending the British Touring Car Championship (BTCC) without any titles last weekend Motorbase Performance are still viewing the season as a qualified success.

The final round at Silverstone was beset by the sort of misfortune which has plagued the team, who compete as Airwaves Racing in the series, in the second half of the season. Punctures and unforeseen mechanical problems meant their tilt at several titles came up short.

Although they finished empty-handed, team manager Oly Collins feels it marked another step forward and the Wrotham-based outfit are now viewed as one of the BTCC's top teams.

He said: "Over the season the team did an amazing job and I think we proved to the rest of the industry that we're a professional and strong team. We were championship protagonists for a long time - you can lead the standings after one or two races and it can be written off as a fluke but to be in front after six rounds that's not the case."

Airwaves' leading driver Mat Jackson's faint hopes of the overall title disappeared with a puncture late in race one and he ultimately had to settle for fourth in the standings.

The team's bad luck hit the 30-year-old, who had led the way deep into the season, hardest and Collins admitted it was hard to take.

He said: "Mat's a budding champion and an extremely talented driver. When you look at the fact he had 10 non-points scoring finishes, which is a third of the championship, and still finished fourth it shows what might have been."

BASKETBALL

Suns coach gets call to take England job

AN IMPRESSIVE record with a Kent basketball club has led to a coach being appointed to a role in the national set-up.

Len Busch (pictured) has spent seven years at Sevenoaks Suns, helping to transform their ladies' and girls' section into one of the best in the country.

The Chicago-born coach will now have to divide his time between club and adopted country after he was put in charge of the England under-18 women.

Busch has experience of the national scene after roles as England under-16 assistant coach and has unsuccessfully applied for a head coach post three times in the past.

The appointment on a two-year contract is well-timed for the Suns, with Busch considering a return to the United States if his fourth attempt failed.

He said: "It's a great challenge because I've been pursuing one of these jobs for some time and have been disappointed in the past.

"I felt I needed something new to do this season and was looking at possible opportunities in the US. I had lined up some things over there if I didn't get the England job, but obviously I'll be staying now."

Busch's first task is to assess the initial squad of 26 at a two-day training camp in Sevenoaks next week in advance of a pre-Christmas tournament in Belgium.

The provisional squad includes four Suns players - sisters Megan and Kaitlyn Lewis, Cheridene Green and Ashleigh Munns.

New arrival sharpens Birchall's focus on long road to recovery

By David Pritchard

david.pritchard@archant.co.uk

OFTEN the biggest concern with players suffering a long-term injury is on the mental rather than physical scars, but three months on from knee surgery Adam Birchall is dealing admirably with both aspects.

Ahead of schedule in his recovery from a devastating injury shortly after signing for Gillingham, the former Dover Athletic striker is off his crutches and able to train on an exercise bike.

The 26-year-old insists there have not been any low points so far and although that may be a touch disingenuous, he remains impressively upbeat.

Birchall's determination to return has been heightened by the birth of his first child, Pearl Marie, last week.

"Now I'm so raring to go it's stupid," he said. "I was anyway but you can't describe being a parent until you are one and now I feel even when I'm back playing I want to be better than I've ever been."

"It's just given me even more of a focus to be the best I can be. I have had that focus but being a parent means you know you have to provide for this little thing now. It's a little bit more serious but it's a journey to go on together."

"It will be nice having her watch me play and getting her a shirt with 'Daddy' on the back."

Birchall is full of praise for the backroom staff at Gillingham who have produced an ever-changing programme of gym work to keep the usually mind numbing rehabilitation work fresh.

Although he is keen to accentuate the positives, the facade slips long enough to admit the isolation away from a squad he barely had time to get to know before the injury has been a challenge.

"That's the hardest part, probably. That's what gets me down the most, if you want to class it as that - but I won't admit it. It's hard because I was here on the training ground for a week and then all of a sudden I'm not there.

"It's hard to interact with the boys, I have to wait for one of them to get injured - touch wood none of them do - but it's only then you get to know people. It's never awkward but it's disappointing because training and playing are huge parts of it."

"Saturdays are very difficult. If they lose I'm very frustrated. I'm a winner anyway and I like to feel a part of it, even though I'm not at the moment. I wouldn't say I felt guilty, just frustrated I can't help them and bring what I know I can for them."

"The whole part of being a team is you enjoy the wins and feel the lows together. You evolve as the season goes on, I see them changing week-in week-out and I'm not actually a part of it, an outsider, but they do their best to make me feel a part of it."

The light at the end of the tunnel is making a playing return and becoming a part of the Gillingham team for the first time since his summer move.

After the experience of Simon King, who spent almost two seasons on the sidelines at Priestfield following ankle surgery, there was initially some doubt over whether the entire campaign would be written off to ensure a full recovery.

Such a notion is immediately dismissed by Birchall, who has set himself the goal of returning in time to boost a potential push for promotion in League Two this season.

He said: "I have a target and I know what I want to hit - at the moment it looks like I will. When you have an op they always give you a date and I'm someone who likes to prove everyone wrong. With this type of thing you've got to be careful but I'm a quick healer."

Picture: ADY KERRY

FOCUSED: Adam Birchall just after his operation

"There was a lot of talk about next season but it will be this season. I wake up and got to bed every day thinking about making my debut for Gillingham, that's my focus, it's what I'm living for at the minute. I can't wait."

FOOTBALL

Sheringham heads for League One as Dartford eye options

CHARLIE Sheringham became the latest player to make the leap from Kent's fertile non-league scene to the Football League after agreeing terms with Bournemouth this week.

The 23-year-old, son of former Manchester United and England striker Teddy, caught the eye of several clubs after netting 11 goals in 12 league games for Dartford.

The Cherries had an offer accepted last week and the transfer was completed on Thursday.

Sheringham would join a host of players to make the step up to the professional ranks after cutting their teeth on the county's non-league circuit. He is the third Darts player to do so in recent years, following in the footsteps of Cody

McDonald and Dave Martin, who left for Norwich City and Crystal Palace respectively.

Darts boss Tony Burman is proud to see ex-players progress.

He said: "We've learned from the deals with Cody and Dave. Those guys have gone on to great things - they're pros and Charlie has a great opportunity."

"The fees we have asked for all three have been acceptable to us but not extortionate to prevent a move happening."

The exit is a knock to Dartford's promotion hopes and they must now look for a replacement to Sheringham, whose goals had helped the side become one of the Conference South's front runners.

The transfer reportedly included

Picture: SPORTSHOTZ.CO.UK

LAST ACT: Charlie Sheringham in his final Dartford appearance last week a fee of £25,000, but Burman warned the Darts would not be held to ransom by other clubs.

He said: "It's a blow to lose any player like that. Charlie's on form at the moment and has been essential to the way we've been playing. But it happens in football and we'll have to find a replacement for him, which will be difficult in itself because the fees go up at this time of year with players under contract."

"At the same time, I'm not prepared to pay over-inflated prices."

NON-LEAGUE FOOTBALL FOCUS

WITH FRED ATKINS

Gone but Peter Nott forgotten

“ONE of football's more enduring myths is that nobody likes to see a manager lose his job.

A former colleague was once so delighted by the news a leading Kent manager had been sacked that he treating us to a bottle of champagne, which we gratefully consumed even though it was only nine in the morning.

His jubilation was born of knowing he'd never again have to hang around in the tunnel for an hour after a game, or make an excruciating phone call in the vain hope of extracting anything more than a banal quote along the lines of: "Ideally we'd like to win on Saturday and failing that draw."

At the risk of sounding vindictive, I can personally give you a long list of managers, from Alex Ferguson downwards, who I'd love to see working behind the counter at KFC, but it wouldn't include Peter Nott, who left Whitstable earlier this week.

I first met Nott when he was appointed manager of Maidstone just under two years ago and like everyone who queued up to interview him after his first game found him polite, obliging and likable.

Being nice to the press doesn't automatically mean you'll be a good manager and Nott's record at Isthmian League level is open to debate, but just looking at his stats doesn't reveal the full story.

It's well documented that while working his way up through the ranks at Maidstone he saw something in Chris Smalling that dozens of others missed.

When he was handed the first team job the team slid from 15th to 18th by the end of his first season, but his brief was to keep the team in the Ryman Premier Division, which he did, in exceptionally trying circumstances.

And while his side only avoided relegation by one place, they were actually four points clear of the drop zone, one more than they had been when he took over.

Maidstone's decision to sack him last October was harsh and if it was justifiable on the grounds of a poor start, his replacement, Andy Ford (an apparently logical choice given his record), subsequently made him look like Marcello Lippi.

At Whitstable last season Nott performed what was arguably an even better rescue act, by rejuvenating a team that looked destined to return to the Kent League, but another poor run saw him offer his resignation three weeks ago and again last Sunday.

A statement was released in which both sides said very nice things about each other, a bit like Liam Fox and David Cameron, only in this instance it sounded like they actually meant it.

The most telling comment was when Nott admitted the job was "getting him down" but it'd be a shame if an ambitious club didn't decide to give him the chance to rediscover his footballing mojo in the near future. And I'm not just saying that because he's nice to reporters.
